Summary Report

The Commission on Population and Development (CPD) held its annual session to consider the following agenda items:

I. Realizing Sexual and Reproductive Rights, Health Services, and Education
II. Supporting Ageing Populations’ Health and Participation in Society
III. Strengthening National Health Systems

The session was attended by representatives of 37 States. On Sunday, the committee adopted the agenda in the order of I, III, II, beginning discussion on the topic of “Realizing Sexual and Reproductive Rights, Health Services, and Education.”

By Tuesday evening, the Dais received a total of nine proposals covering a wide range of sub-topics including the prevention of gender based violence, encouraging greater education across multiple age groups, increasing initiatives to protect the health of mother and child, supporting non-governmental organizations in progressing sexual and reproductive rights, supporting financial assistance to governmental and non-governmental organizations, prioritizing rights in marginalized societies, family planning, and greater support to prevent and combat HIV/AIDS and STI’s. The committee was working effectively, focusing largely on the role of NGO’s and calling for continued cooperation and support between them while merging their working papers.

By Wednesday morning, four draft resolutions had been approved by the Dais, three of which had amendments. The committee adopted four resolutions, one of which received unanimous support by the body and was adopted by acclamation. The resolutions represented a wide range of issues including sexual and reproductive rights, health services, and education, financial assistance for governmental and non-governmental organizations, prioritizing rights in marginalized societies, maternal and infant health, reducing gender based violence, and creating culturally sensitive sexual education and health services impacting maternal health, child marriages, and female genital mutilation.

The Commission on Population and Development’s efforts to synthesize and work collaboratively were successful. Their passion and dedication to the topic resulted in resolutions that were well thoughtful and displayed the in-depth research each delegation brought to session each and every day.
The Commission on Population and Development,

Reaffirming the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, specifically Articles 2 and 3, which address discrimination and the human right to life, liberty, and security,

Noting Millennium Development Goals 3, 4, 5, and 6 and the international progress that has been made towards achieving these goals,

Recalling Articles 24 and 34 of the Convention on the Rights of the Child, Goal 3 and Target 3.c of the Open Working Group on Sustainable Development, and Article 12 of the International Covenant on Economic, Social, and Cultural Rights,

Supporting continued involvement by the World Health Organization (WHO) and the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) in devoting parts of their annual budgets to the issue of sexual health education and policy,

Emphasizing the need for continued financial support for sexual and reproductive education programs,

Recognizing that health is interlinked with economic and social development, and sexual and reproductive health rights are central to the achievement of global, regional, and national commitments to sustainable development,

Drawing attention to the increasing cost of medical care throughout the world,

Further recognizing the large burden that health care expenses present for Member States, especially the financial costs associated with providing health care to rural areas of the global community,

1. Invites Member States to uphold their financial commitments to the UNFPA to the best of their financial capacity;

2. Encourages financial partnerships between Member States, UN subsidiary bodies and global nongovernmental organizations (NGOs) to:
   a. Increase investments in the health and education sectors to promote sexual and reproductive health;
   b. Provide financial assistance to domestic NGOs that provide educational services and programs focused on sexual and reproductive health in developing states;

3. Recommends that Member States ease the process for international NGOs to provide microloans to domestic organizations by making small businesses aware of the United Nations Global Micro Lending and other possible sources of microloans to increase investment into, and development of health care facilities and sexual and reproductive health education programs;

4. Directs attention to the UNFPA and the World Bank as a source of providing macro-loans for the purpose of sexual and reproductive health care services in developing states;

5. Calls upon the Governments of Member States to establish a domestic renewable and sustainable fund to:
   a. Increase investments in the public health and sexual and reproductive education sectors to increase accessibility to health facilities, programs, and services;
b. Provide financial assistance to domestic NGOs who provide educational services and programs focused on improving sexual and reproductive health;

6. Welcomes the creation and sustainment of Public Private Partnerships between Governments and civil society stakeholders to decrease the financial and technical burden on Governments and assist in successful implementation of the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development;

7. Encourages multilateral and bilateral partnerships, especially between developing and developed Member States, to provide financial assistance to sexual and reproductive health care programs implemented by national health systems.
The Commission on Population and Development,

Taking note of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, in particular Article 25 pertaining to the right to an adequate standard of living, health, and well-being,

Acknowledging the importance of sexual and reproductive services in promoting the health of the world population,

Recognizing that affordable and accessible sexual and reproductive health services will empower communities and governments,

Recognizing the urban-rural divide in accessing the same levels of healthcare,

Noting the discrimination that many migrants face,

Recalling Commission on Population and Development (CPD) Resolution 2012/1, which affirms that youth and adolescents belong to different demographic groups and trends and that they have various impacts on development, and require the consideration of the uniqueness of their groups in terms of their sexual and reproductive rights,

Deeply concerned that marginalized groups do not enjoy equal access to human rights and sexual and reproductive services,

Deeply aware that the prioritization of education for marginalized groups such as indigenous peoples, the poor and the youth has been lacking in consideration,

1. Recognizes the inherent inequalities which exists in sexual and reproductive health (SRH) services between various groups of society as a result of socio-economic, geographic, cultural and other discriminatory factors;

2. Encourages partnerships between more stakeholders in the health community such as governments, Non-Governmental organizations (NGOs), and specialized agencies to facilitate effective SRH outcomes to all sectors of society, such as the access to modern contraceptives at a lower cost, with additional participation of:
   a. Pharmaceutical companies;
   b. Hospitals and clinics;
   c. Healthcare professionals;
   d. Regional partnerships;
   e. International organizations such as the World Health Organization and the World Bank;

3. Encourages all Member States to implement SRH initiatives in rural communities, including but not limited to:
   a. Infrastructure development through the creation of more clinics and hospitals;
   b. Implementation of mobile health clinics through cooperation with NGOs to provide contraceptive access, birth control, medicinal access, and antenatal and postnatal health services;
c. Professional training institutions for local health personnel in order to provide additional SRH services in clinics and hospitals;

d. Raising community awareness through public health campaigns and open community forums;

e. Provision of incentives to medical personnel to work in rural areas, by providing:

i. Scholarships programs;

ii. Residency placement programs;

iii. Volunteer programs;

iv. Updated technology, medicines and equipment to medical services providers;

4. Recommends that Governments promote that those affected by the Human Immunodeficiency Virus and/or Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (HIV/AIDS) access SRH services, without discrimination, through:

a. Public awareness campaigns concentrated on informing the public of the nature of the disease and the treatments available, such as:

i. Public events focused on the awareness of the spread of HIV/AIDS and prevention measures;

ii. Utilization of mass media as an outlet to educate the public through means such as, but not limited to, internet, television, and publications;

iii. Sexual education seminars for those who are HIV/AIDS positive, including family members and community health members;

b. Affordable and accessible medication and other treatment services;

c. Voluntary counselling in the forms of support groups and therapists;

5. Encourages Governments to provide financial assistance for persons living in urban regions with low socio-economic status, in relation to SRH services including:

a. Government subsidized reproductive health services;

b. Enrollment of all new parents in family planning programs that will provide the necessary materials for family planning such as contraceptives and counselling services;

6. Recommends that in order to promote SRH to indigenous communities, Member States should consider social and economic barriers such as limited resources, lack of knowledge and cultural traditions by:

a. Engaging in dialogue with local indigenous leaders to share knowledge and facilitate mutual understanding of cultural SRH practices;

b. Promoting modern SRH services in a way that considers the unique nature of their communities;

c. Providing access to updated knowledge, technology and medical resources;

7. Endorses governments to legislate on measures to prevent discriminatory practices towards migrants in relation to SRH services through discouraging initiatives that punish young migrants for becoming infected with sexually transmitted infections/diseases (STIs/STDs) or becoming pregnant by establishing programs that provide affordable and accessible healthcare for migrant communities;

8. Recognizes that ageing populations need to be considered by healthcare providers, in relation to SRH services, by:
a. Providing adequate, age-appropriate sexual education which involves informing the ageing community of STIs/STDs, of their transmission and of their preventative care;

b. Creating clinics especially for the elderly where age-appropriate care can be provided;

c. Implementing programs in retirement homes where an increasing number of STIs/STDs are present;

9. Encouraging the fulfillment of Member States’ obligations to these marginalized groups through the implementation of educational initiatives for the full realization of all individuals’ SRH rights, such as:

a. Allocating funds specifically toward education programs focusing on in-country health and sexual education initiatives for adolescents, the improvement of health institutions and to support mothers and expecting parents;

b. Supporting efforts of the UNFPA towards creating educational systems which will assist each Member State’s youth in the prevention of STIs and unplanned pregnancies;

c. Promoting the review of national school curriculum of Member States to address comprehensive sexual education for adolescents;

d. Adopting community-based educational programs that promote HIV/AIDS prevention, which addresses both genders and informing the public to undermine the discrimination of those affected by HIV/AIDS.
The Commission on Population and Development,

Recalling the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, with particular attention to Article 25.2, and its focus on motherhood and childhood care, and the 1994 International Conference on Population and Development, which called for an official recognition of the rights of a person for sexual education and access to health services,

Taking note of the principles of the 1995 Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, and the need to assert the right of women to health care,

Keeping in mind the 2008 United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) Report “Making Reproductive Rights and Sexual and Reproductive Health a Reality for All,” which defines access to antenatal, postnatal care, sexual health and reproductive education as sexual rights,

Further recalling the necessity of pursuing Sustainable Development Goal 3, as presently recommended by the Open Working Group, to reduce child mortality to less than 70 per 100,000 live births, and Goal 5 to improve maternal health,

Bearing in mind the essential nature of the overall health and well-being of the mother towards the proper development of the fetus,

Recognizing that 14 million children are married each year, that the leading cause of death for girls ages 15-19 is childbirth, and that approximately 80% of maternal deaths could be avoided if women had access to essential maternity and basic healthcare services,

Reiterating the concern expressed by the 2009 UNICEF Report “The State of the World’s Children” on the imperative need for increased resource allocation towards health facilities to combat alarming rates of maternal mortality,

Bearing in mind the recommendation of UNESCO that basic emergency obstetric health care should be increased to a minimum of four facilities per population of 500,000 people, adjusted to each state’s specific circumstances,

Noting the essential role of education in reducing child marriage, infant mortality and maternal mortality, and the need to lower barriers to primary, secondary, and sexual education,

Calling attention to evidence that a girl who receives 8 years of education is 4 times less likely to be married as a child and is at a lower risk of maternal mortality and mortality of their children,

Bearing in mind the need to remove legislation that hinders women and young girls from access to health services, as observed by the Economic and Social Council (ECOSOC) World Programme of Action for Youth 2010,

Reaffirming Security Council Resolution S/RES/1325 which condemns female genital mutilation and cutting (FGM/C),

Calling attention to Commission on Population and Development’s Report E/CN.9/2002/6 on Reproductive Rights and Reproductive Health which emphasizes the need to eliminate discrimination faced by children born with Human Immunodeficiency Virus/Acquired Immune Deficiency Virus (HIV/AIDS),

Noting further that respect for the differing cultures and beliefs of each Member State is essential in creating a sustainable plan for sexual and reproductive health rights and education while simultaneously respecting the sovereignty of each Member State,
1. Calls upon Member States to acknowledge that sexual and reproductive health, rights, and education must remain a primary focus in the Post-2015 development agenda, in particular educating children and youth, and their communities in order to protect them from early marriage, maternal mortality, and HIV/AIDS;

2. Supports collaboration between relevant health professionals and international organizations in the development of comprehensive antenatal and postnatal educational programs in order to intervene and address the knowledge gaps that result in practices which endanger the lives of mothers and children;

3. Urges Member States to re-engage with midwifery experts in order to:
   a. Establish awareness campaigns for the public, especially expectant mothers, through collaboration between experts and national health ministries to eliminate the stigma of midwifery practices through the establishment of educational initiatives;
   b. Create national platforms that provide minimum standards of midwives’ training in order to ensure adequate healthcare;

4. Recommends that Member States, health ministries and community leaders carry out equipment training for health personnel to properly use materials needed to conduct suitable health treatments for pregnant women in need of greater specialized attention;

5. Further recommends that Governments offer community education centers for facilitating access to information and discussion of sexual health between children and their decision makers, such as parents, religious leaders and community leaders, while taking into consideration qualities of rural populations that make providing education more difficult than in urban areas, such as lower socio-economic standards and more dispersed populations;

6. Encourages the international community to respect the cultural identity and sovereignty of all Member States, in conjunction with public and civil society groups, by implementing culturally competent programs aimed towards raising awareness among youth and children and their parents, community leaders, and religious leaders, thus providing citizens of all cultures with the information necessary to make important decisions for their children’s sexual and emotional health and well-being through:
   a. Educational websites, television, radio programs and cultural community events;
   b. Bilateral and multilateral information-sharing networks, especially between developing and developed Member States, facilitated by international organizations such as the World Health Organization, to foster the sharing and spread of information regarding the promotion of maternal health;
   c. National and local schooling systems, where available, to discuss maternal health and early parenting education;

7. Invites Member States to remain cognizant of the advice of international organizations, such as UN Women and WHO, and epistemic communities, to synthesize and make available resources and practices that focus on maternal health for the proliferation of essential information to populations in rural and developing regions, who are susceptible to complications during pregnancy;

8. Expresses its hopes in reducing the gap between urban and rural access to ante-natal and post-natal care for mother and child, including disadvantaged groups within urban centers, with the goal of increasing:
   a. Basic emergency obstetric health care to a minimum of four facilities per population of 500,000 people, adjusted to each state’s specific circumstances;
   b. Collaboration and communication among all levels of governments to effectively provide public health services at the community level;
9. Encourages all Member States to coordinate with international organizations, such as WHO, and relevant health experts, to provide training to birth attendants for disadvantaged minority communities as a means of acquiring the appropriate competencies and expertise to carry out a secure delivery and assure a safe environment for pregnant women and their children;

10. Strongly encourages all Member States to work together to improve access to sexual and reproductive education and health services worldwide, through, inter alia:

   a. The development of public and private investments in medical services and hospitals to expand access to medical care to effectively address diseases and epidemics;

   b. Collaboration with top-level private grant-making donors that support children’s projects around the world;

11. Suggests that Members States prioritize universal access to ante- and postnatal health care as part of the national healthcare system aiming at the elimination of preventable maternal and child mortality or morbidity, joining efforts with WHO in promoting the accessibility of prenatal vitamins, iodine and prenatal nutrition for all women regardless of state or socioeconomic status;

12. Further recommends that Members States, with United Nations agencies, particularly the WHO, establish strategies providing support, with consideration of the unique needs of pregnant women and new mothers suffering from sexually transmitted diseases such as HIV/AIDS and pregnancy- and childbirth related complications including obstetric fistulas, to be achieved by:

   a. Providing a strong state education system addressing specific health needs of mothers affected by HIV/AIDS;

   b. Increasing the proportion of local clinics to offer early interventions by implementing antenatal HIV testing and treatment for the purpose of reducing maternal and neo-natal deaths;

13. Invites Governments to provide sexual, reproductive, and mental health services in efforts to rehabilitate victims of forced child marriage and forced FGM/C, by:

   a. Supporting local initiatives which are equipped to effectively provide mental health counseling specific to sexual trauma;

   b. Promoting regional, multilateral media approaches that discourage discrimination of persons affected by sexual and reproductive-based violence such as those living with sexually transmitted diseases and victims of child marriage;

14. Calls upon the international community to eradicate FGM/C through:

   a. International partnerships between Member States and UN bodies, that enhance the capacity of Governments to implement plans of action specifically protecting women and girls from FGM/C;

   b. Educational initiatives aimed towards youth and community leaders to pursue a change in attitudes regarding FGM/C and encourages the respect for the rights of women and girls, and emphasizes the importance of education and schooling towards the development of children;

   c. Health care legislation that provides physical and mental health services to victims of FGM/C;

15. Welcomes any additional suggestions that can help strengthen the mission and form a common front in facing population health issues and reach unprecedented levels of economic growth and sustainable development as a result.
The Commission on Population and Development,

Acknowledging the United Nations Charter Article 2 and the sovereign right of each individual state,

Reaffirming the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development and the Beijing Platform, and its efforts made to implement gender inclusivity, health services, and education,

Recognizes the substantial efforts of Sexual and Reproductive Health (SRH) focused NGOs regarding their progressive methods to decrease infant mortality rates through provision of prenatal care, increase the quality of maternal care, assist in the provision of SRH education, training, and employment services,

Recalling the right to universal healthcare as stated in Article 25 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,

Aware of the importance of education and its impact on sexual and reproductive health,

Recognizing the essential nature of pre and neonatal health for mothers across the world in order to decrease maternal mortality and child morbidity,

Reaffirming General Assembly resolutions A/RES/67/146 and A/RES/64/145 which condemn all forms of gender based violence, especially female genital mutilation and cutting (FGM/C)

Recognizing the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) report Adding It Up 2014 that contraceptives are a critical part of preventing unintended pregnancies and reducing the spread of sexually transmitted diseases,

Recognizing family planning as a key way to prevent unintended pregnancies and reduce the spread of sexually transmitted diseases,

Taking note that women and children in poor socioeconomic status are often the most vulnerable to gender based violence, disease and injury,

Bearing in mind the concern over the spread of Human Immunodeficiency Virus/Acquired Immune Deficiency Virus (HIV/AIDS), and the goals of the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS) of achieving 90% of individuals with HIV/AIDS diagnosed, 90% on treatment; 90% virally suppressed, Noting with great concern the high numbers of unintended pregnancies worldwide, threatening the infrastructure of each Member States health services,

Respecting the sensitive nature of this topic with cultural differences between states,

Taking note of the work that has already been done by the international community to provide high-quality sexual education and health services via such entities as the UNFPA, the Human Rights Council (HRC), United Nations Children’s Fund (UNICEF), the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), as well as numerous Non-Governmental Organizations (NGOs),

Keeping in mind that the international community continues to be faced by incredible challenges in providing affordable and accessible sexual education to all peoples, as is laid out in the ICPD, in light of cultural, geographic, economic, and political barriers,

Declaring the importance of inclusive sexual and reproductive services for all ages, Drawing attention to the importance of providing comprehensive education concerning HIV/AIDS with the help of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization through its global program EDUCAID,

Noting previous work done to increase awareness of sexual education curriculum and methodology in rural areas such as in the programmes undertaken by the UNFPA and the H4+ group (WHO, UNICEF, World Bank, and UNAIDS), the UNICEF and United Nations Educational Scientific and Cultural Organization’s (UNESCO) partnership program, Living and Learning in a World with HIV/AIDS,

Reaffirming CPD resolution 2011/1 on Fertility, Reproductive Health, and Development, which highlighted the obligation to provide accessible contraceptives and family planning services,

Calling attention to the efforts of UNAIDS in creating awareness on the effects of sexually transmitted infections (STIs),

Cognizant of resolution E/2012/1, which emphasizes the significance of providing sexual reproductive health education to adolescents to deter STIs,

1. Reaffirms the sovereign right of each Member State to implement recommendations, consistent with national laws and cultural differences, with full respect for religious or ethnic variances in population;

2. Welcomes Member States who support NGO efforts regarding SRH issues within their borders by:
   a. Creating a safe environment for NGO development workers and activities;
   b. Increasing logistical support where possible, such as expediting the visa process for development workers;
   c. Assisting NGOs in meeting national and international legal standards for their operation;
   d. Actively engaging in discourse with NGOs;

3. Encourages Member States to develop National Action Plans that increase capacity building measures, implement best practice sharing methods, and collaborate with local government;

4. Emphasizes the importance of education on safe sex practice to impede the spread of sexually transmitted infections through programs or public private partnerships;

5. Notes that educating youth and adolescents about natural reproductive processes, such as menstrual cycles, starting at a pre-pubescent age with respect to the social and mental development of children;

6. Encourages training on the proper use of contraceptives and methods of family planning to prevent unwanted pregnancies;

7. Calls upon the international community to share knowledge about educational programmes such as the UNFPA Youth Strategic Plan 2014-17 in order for Member States to implement within their own educational systems comprehensive sexuality education, thereby empowering young people and promoting informed decisions about their sexuality and health and increasing accessibility and availability of quality sexual and reproductive health information and education in accordance with the ICPD;

8. Recommends that all Member States continue to focus on providing robust sexual education services despite the barriers that are common in developing states through the help of such entities as UNICEF, UNFPA and ECOSOC by including information about gender inequalities within classrooms, schools and sexual education programmes to raise awareness of sexual and reproductive rights and health information for young populations;
9. Stresses the importance of educating students in primary and secondary schools under the jurisdiction of each Government’s Ministry of Education regarding gender equality and the concerned about Sexually Transmitted Infections (STIs) in order to prevent the consequences of such wide-spreads infections by:

a. Promoting the UNESCO’s strategy on HIV and AIDS, which approach comprehensive Sexuality education (CSE);

b. Implementing the UNAIDS Inter-Agency Task Team (IATT) that supports and promotes leadership to increase health education and HIV prevention with the collaboration of governments and local agencies;

c. Taking into consideration the Standards of Sexuality Education that have been established in the WHO guidelines;

10. Endorses the reduction of adolescent birth rates (ABR) by:

a. Increasing school enrollment and access to education;

b. Removing gender barriers for access to education in a safe and stable environment;

c. Implementing sexual education within school curriculums and community structures in accordance to the preference of each Member State;

11. Further encourages Member States to improve access to contraceptive services for all on a national and international level by:

a. Emphasizing that financial assistance be provided to developing countries in order to improve and access to contraceptives;

b. Encouraging the utilization of already-existing programs to provide equitable access, quality, and choice of contraceptives by evaluating country specific needs;

c. Achieving a general education on reproductive health care for a better understanding on the use of contraceptives through:

   i. An awareness campaigns that highlights and promotes the importance of contraceptive methods through community outreach programs;

   ii. The implementation of education programs on sexual and reproductive health in schools

   iii. UN bodies and NGOs for expertise such as UN Women;

12. Recommends that Member States collaborate with organizations such as the UNFPA in order to enhance awareness of breastfeeding health by:

a. Reaffirming international guidelines such as the United Nations Children’s Fund (UNICEF) Global Strategy for Infant and Young Child Feeding global strategy that provide training workshops for mothers in order to enhance maternal health;

b. Urging international agencies to utilize collaborative vaccine and immunization programmes to eradicate sudden infant death syndrome;

c. Promoting maternal health frameworks that promote the nutritional advantages of breastfeeding;

13. Recommends more public private partnerships which seeks to promote collaboration between local governments and the private sector to create public private partnerships in order to provide greater access to family planning services;
14. Invites the body to reaffirm General Assembly resolution A/RES/67/146 to intensify efforts of eradicating female genital mutilation by working all Member States;

15. Emphasizes the need for international community to cooperate to reduce the spread of HIV/AIDs and increase detection and treatment;

16. Deplores the stigma associated with individuals with HIV/AIDs, existing in the form of harassment and legal barriers to care, employment and transportation as well as discrimination;

17. Recognizes the need for education to empower individuals with HIV/AIDs with awareness of their rights;

18. Encourages the World Bank to instigate further collaborative initiatives with states to work with programs that target high risk sectors of the population most susceptible to HIV/AIDs;

19. Recommends all Member States pursue the goal UNAIDS of 90-90-90: 90% of individuals with HIV/AIDs diagnosed; 90% on treatment; 90% virally suppressed, to put HIV/AIDs on track to being reduced and controlled;

20. Emphasizes the need to prevent the transmission of HIV/AIDS from mother to child by:
   a. Encouraging AIDS screening tests during the pregnancy in accordance with family planning strategies;
   b. Following global guidelines on HIV/AIDS prevention and testing in order to decrease the transmission of the disease;
   c. Encouraging post-natal medical follow-ups to avoid and decrease infections;
   d. Insisting on the importance of avoiding HIV mother to child transmission by promoting the use of Antiretroviral (ARV) drugs during the stage when infection can occur;

21. Suggests the international community implement multilateral efforts in cooperation with NGOs and governments to improve women’s sexual and reproductive health rights in rural areas by:
   a. Providing options in order to encourage women to pursue a professional path before establishing a family;
   b. Guaranteeing access to natural and artificial methods of birth control as well as medical assistance throughout the pregnancy respecting cultural beliefs;
   c. Making available medical and concern, and to women who require it;

22. Further encourages states to investigate Family Planning 2020s goals to reach an additional 120 million women and girls in the world’s poorest countries with access to voluntary family planning education, contraceptives, and services by 2020;

23. Calls upon the reinforcement and implementation of the UNFPA Family Planning Strategy 2012-2020, in so doing all Member States should focused on:
   a. Provision of information about child mortality, maternal care, HIV/AIDS;
   b. The affordability of contraceptives;
   c. The confidentiality for each person consulting a family planning counselling services;
24. Recognizes that the ICPD identifies family planning as essential to providing information and care involved with maternal issues and education in order to ensure that the best decisions are made regarding their health, socioeconomic situations, family and beliefs;

25. Invites Member States to further efforts to stop child marriages by:
   a. Advocating Governments to pass legislation supporting the rights of youth and individuals to choose for themselves, and the establishment of minimum age laws for marriage;
   b. Encouraging gender equality and respect for the rights of women and girls;
   c. Recognizing and addressing the underlying causes of child marriages such as lack of educational opportunities, absences of economic opportunities and discriminatory practices against young women;

26. Recommends that all Member States continue to focus on providing robust sexual education services despite barriers that are common in developing states through the help of such entities as UNICEF, UNFPA and ECOSOC by including information about gender inequalities within schools and sexual education programmes to raise awareness of sexual and reproductive rights and health information for young populations;

27. Stresses the importance of educating students in primary and secondary schools under the jurisdiction of each Government’s Ministry of Education regarding gender equality and the concerned about Sexually Transmitted Infections (STIs) in order to prevent the consequences of such wide-spreads infections by:
   a. Promoting the UNESCO’s strategy on HIV and AIDS, which approach comprehensive Sexuality education (CSE);
   b. Implementing the UNAIDS Inter-Agency Task Team (IATT) that supports and promotes leadership to increase health education and HIV prevention with the collaboration of governments and local agencies;
   c. Taking into consideration the Standards of Sexuality Education that have been established in the WHO guidelines;
