Summary Report for the United Nations Human Rights Council (HRC)

The United Nations Human Rights Council (HRC) held its annual session to consider the following agenda items:

I. Advancing International Human Rights to Protect Against Discrimination on the Basis of Sexual Orientation and Gender Identity
II. Protecting the Rights of Migrant Workers
III. Protecting and Promoting Human Rights in Post-Conflict Societies

The session was attended by representatives of 47 States. The first session opened with several speeches and motions of delegates eagerly attempting to adapt a particular agenda, but ultimately adopting the agenda of III, II, I, beginning with the topic, “Protecting and Promoting Human Rights in Post-Conflict Societies.”

The delegates worked efficiently through the Monday committee sessions with working papers presented to the Dais on Monday evening. By Tuesday morning, the Dais received a total of 12 working papers covering a wide array of subtopics, including transitional justice, education, and rule of law, to women’s rights, sports for development and peace, housing for IDPs and water management. The delegates continued to work in a collaborative manner to address the complex nature of the topic while remaining professional and practicing their diplomatic skills. Although the committee initially had 12 working papers with several dissonances, delegates merged into five working papers resulting in a total of nine draft resolutions.

On Wednesday, eight draft resolutions were approved by the Dais, seven of which had amendments. The committee adopted seven resolutions following voting procedure, one of which passed by acclamation. The resolutions were well-rounded and included topics of local/cultural sensitivity, women’s empowerment, political and socio-economic rights, water supply, and education. The delegates’ had a passion for the topic and worked diligently throughout the conference to create realistic resolutions that would protect human rights in post-conflict societies. The body was triumphant in successfully finding the intersection of varying national polices, without compromising or undermining the national integrity of any Member State.
The Human Rights Council,

Acknowledging the high level of efficiency gained from taking a localized and culturally sensitive approach to post-conflict recovery and human rights violation prevention,

Highlighting the importance of regional bodies in addressing peacekeeping efforts in post-conflict societies,

Reaffirming the human right to the maintenance of integrity and dignity in regards to cultural sensitivity and the right to self-determination,

Emphasizing the primary responsibility that Member States have to ensure the implementation of human rights for their citizens, to end impunity, restore the rule of law, and to prosecute persons responsible for war crimes or crimes against humanity,

Recognizing the significant and crucial role of Member States that support peacebuilding efforts of the United Nations (UN) through financial and technical support, peacekeeping troops, peacebuilding experts, and civilian police contributions,

Recalling Human Rights Council Advisory Committee specifying in its 2014’s publication Human Rights in Post-Disaster/Post-Conflict Situations that an alarming number of more than 44 million people are currently victim of human rights violations in the aftermath of conflicts and disasters,

Stressing the importance of supporting national and transitional authorities in the identification of their priorities to ensure reconstruction and peace,

Acknowledging that fostering culturally and locally sensitive approaches in peacebuilding will reinforce a reciprocal trust of the people in the recovery process and therefore ensure efficiency,

Recognizing the need to increase the involvement of local communities in the recovery and peacebuilding process in order to reach vulnerable and remote areas,

Recognizing the great contributions to universal human rights promotion enacted by the UN Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR), the UN Development Program (UNDP), and the UN Peacebuilding Commission,

Noting with Approval Post-Crisis Needs Assessment (PCNA) programs implemented in specific Member States, such as Pakistan, to initially assess the human rights situation in a post-conflict society before promoting and enhancing universal access to human rights for all,

Appreciating highly the Italian Centre of Excellence for Stability Police Units (COESPU) for the training of specialized personnel who engage in peacebuilding efforts,

Taking into account the UNDP 2008 Report on Post-Conflict Economic Recovery: Enabling Local Ingenuity and its emphasis on the role of local and grassroots agents to address post-conflict issues rather than external actors,

1. Praises the use of the PCNA program to study more specifically each post-conflict situation and examine each Member State’s needs by:

   a. Providing a rapid Damage and Needs Assessment (DNA), which analyzes the significance of the damage caused by conflict and determines what will be necessary to begin the peacebuilding process;
b. Analyzing government infrastructures vulnerable to destruction, which would limit access to proper housing and thus human rights in order to:

i. Prevent conflict relapse by analyzing previously temperamental or susceptible aspects of governmental infrastructure which affects human rights in post-conflict societies;

ii. Manage conflict risk by focusing on the aforementioned structures and implementing countermeasures to combat aspects of society which may be prone to decline and deterioration;

iii. Provide directions based on the assessment results which will initiate and structure the initial stage of long-term human rights violation prevention;

iv. Monitor the vulnerable segments of society for warning signs of human rights abuses specific to each post-conflict situation;

2. Encourages the expansion of UNITAR to include an annual workshop for post-conflict regions’ peacebuilding units to discuss culturally sensitive prevention of post-conflict human rights violation that will:

   a. Invite all Member States, regional NGOs, local community leaders, religious leaders, and national government leaders, in order to promote ongoing culturally sensitive and localized approaches to maintaining human rights;

   b. Promote the sharing of best practice solutions concerning culturally sensitive programs to prevent further violations of human rights while acknowledging and promoting successful solutions for local and regional post-conflict peacebuilding;

   c. Initiate annual meetings which will include willing and able national and regional stakeholders, peacebuilding experts, and the most at risk local communities affected by post conflict crises to discuss and promote successful post-conflict peacebuilding processes and address and resolve post-conflict disputes;

3. Further Encourages the UNDP and UNITAR to establish an effective, culturally sensitive training program which will aim to deter human rights violations in post-conflict peacebuilding in cooperation with local, national, and regional stakeholders including, but not limited to national and local authorities and experts, cultural and religious community leaders, and related local and national NGOs;

4. Expresses its hope that Member States will continue to contribute to peacebuilding efforts conducted by the UN Peacebuilding Commission within their individual means by:

   a. Exchanging peacebuilding strategies, security expertise, and technical cooperation via bilateral and regional peacebuilding cooperation;

   b. Providing training experts and technological mentoring in cooperation with related NGOs in order to combat technical issues that could inhibit the maintenance of human rights;

   c. Providing short term humanitarian aid materials via related NGOs such as Peacebuilding Solutions (PBS) which aims to provide sustainable aid to post-conflict societies;

5. Proposes the expansion of UNDATA, the United Nations Database to specifically gather culturally sensitive and localized data from willing and able resources such as, but not limited to, community leaders, national and local authorities, and religious leaders, which will:

   a. Include specific statistics concerning violations of human rights in post-conflict situations;

   b. Include cultural norms of national and local groups to promote respect for cultural sensitivity towards aforementioned groups by national and local authorities;

   c. Highlight case studies and reports involving successful localized approaches to promoting cultural sensitivity and human rights adopted at a national, regional, and local level;
6. Promotes the empowerment and capacity-building of local communities and local actors to:
   a. Administer the recovery process in order to efficiently reach vulnerable and remote areas in an effective way;
   b. Increase funding, using the aforementioned sources to local and decentralized institutions and organizations;

7. Further suggests that Member States honor their financial commitment to the UN Democracy Fund and UN Peacebuilding Fund, which aid in the development of regional and local approaches to post-conflict peacebuilding and the prevention of human rights violations.

Annex

1. Suggests the promotion of justice and reconciliation in post-conflict society at a local level for each unique conflict within any and all willing Member States by:
   a. Considering the utilization of OHCHR’s tool for mapping the justice sector;
   b. Providing local leaders with international law training in order to empower them to address and redress human rights violations, while respecting local and traditional judicial mechanisms;
   c. Promoting capacity building in regards to the prevention of future conflicts;
   d. Instituting an international day of remembrance to recognize and honor victims of conflict;
   e. Encouraging the remembrance of the devastation caused by the atrocities that victims endured during the conflict and the stability gained from reconstruction.
The Human Rights Council,

Bearing in mind the General Assembly Resolution 22/16 on the Protection and Promotion of Human Rights in Post-Conflict Societies and Post-Disastrous Situations,

Reaffirming the Universal Declaration of Human Rights Article 26 and Resolution 8/2 of June 2008, stating that everyone has the right to education,

Fulfilling the International Covenant of Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, and the Convention on the Rights of the Child, which outlines how the best interests of a child should be a primary consideration,

Recalling General Assembly Resolution 64/290 regarding the rights to education in emergency situations as an essential proposal for future development,

Guided by the General Assembly Resolution 64/292 in recognizing the human right to water and sanitation in post-conflict societies,

Bearing in mind the Resolution 7/14, as well as Article 25.1 in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, affirming the right to food as a basic and essential right to life,

Recognizing UNDHR Article 26.1 and HRC Resolution 8/4 emphasizing the fact that all women and men shall enjoy the human right to education and strengthening the respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Recalling the General Assembly Resolution 56/116 affirming the right of literacy for all, and promoting literacy to achieve the goals of education for all,

Fully alarmed by the large numbers of refugees fleeing to the States neighboring Syria, including Iraq, Lebanon, Turkey, and Jordan,

Recognizing the hope and intent for the over 11 million refugees currently living worldwide to return to their homes when violent conflict ceases,

Desiring a resolution for all post-conflict societies implementing the following recommendations to be first tested in Syria after the end of conflict, and to later be adapted to future post-conflict societies, if successful,

Recognizing the instability and temporary nature of standard refugee camps and desiring to provide an enduring assistance structure to ensure the basic human rights of housing, education, food and water,

Acknowledging the lack of educational services that may be present in post-conflict societies where victims of conflict have recently returned,

Bearing in mind the necessity of access to education as stated in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,

Acknowledging that many women and girls are often victims of sexual and gender-based violence in post-conflict societies,

Welcoming the steps taken at the national level to implement the right to education, including the enactment of appropriate legislation,
Recognizing the essential right to health as outlined in the Resolution 11/12, to provide basic access to all health services, goods and facilities for all women and men, as well as the Resolution 11/18 affirming the need for maternal health initiatives to combat maternal mortality and morbidity,

Emphasizing the large-scale destruction of both residential and economic areas in post-conflict societies,

Keeping in mind such destruction is prevalent in many immediate post-conflict situations,

Deeply disturbed by the lack of clean water and sanitation specifically in these destroyed areas, as this allows diseases like cholera and polio to spread,

Noting with deep concern the high occurrence of water shortages in post-conflict societies,

Having devoted attention to the significant number of people lacking access to refugee camps, who occupy inadequate shelter, with no access to heat or running water, with the desire to improve these living conditions and ensure basic housing for all,

Concerned that refugees returning to their home countries after the end of conflict will also lack access to adequate and secure housing,

Recognizing the high possibility of corruption in post-conflict areas and the great need to provide active monitoring systems to mitigate this possibility,

1. Recommends coordination with the UNHCR in the creation of semi-permanent community centers:

   a. Whose funding would be allocated by the General Assembly Fifth Committee;

   b. Which should be located on the outskirts of the cities and towns most affected by the conflict (these being the most destroyed areas):

      i. To serve as the hub for the distribution of foreign humanitarian aid and resources;

      ii. To be patrolled by local security forces in the form of police trained by the United Nations security forces;

      iii. To be available to returning civilians that were former refugees in host Member States, with the option of being able to stay at these centers for up to eighteen months, and to apply for an additional six months, before they will be asked to find alternative housing;

   c. Which will be active for a maximum of ten years, before being gradually reduced as more permanent replacements continue to be built in the city, town or village to sustain its former residents:

   d. Which will be occupied by returning refugees through an application process in which:

      i. Community centers would be filled in the order that applications are received, this being determined by the staff of the community center reviewing such applications;

      ii. Wait-lists will be generated and spots will be filled as they become available;

2. Suggests that these semi-permanent community centers should provide the following necessary services, which include:

   a. A safe place for returning refugees to live while permanent structures and housing are being built or repaired;

   b. Educational services initiated by the Human Rights Council and administered by UNESCO and UNICEF for both youth and adults, in which:

      i. Youth primary education would be provided for children ages 5-18;
ii. Adult vocational programs and job placement services would be provided to those in need;

3. Encourages agricultural education programs for the community center inhabitants, with the intent of creating sustainable procedures for food security and production, by:

a. Encouraging increased bi-lateral cooperation with post-conflict societies and the international community to implement strategies of education in regards to sustainable agriculture and resource management;

b. Suggesting a relationship with the highly commendable organisations of the Global Alliance for Improved Nutrition, the Food and Agriculture Organization, the Weather Index Insurance Program, and the World Food Program to assist in the education of the local community about:

i. Securing basic agricultural and nutritional needs;

ii. Protecting agriculture from the issues of extreme climate circumstances, such as drought, frost, flooding and other unpredictable conditions;

iii. Promoting crop rehabilitation and soil health, as well as long term management of land cultivation;

iv. Initiating progressive and creative solutions for crop development, such as indoor and vertical farming;

c. Endorsing the work carried out by the International Fund of Agricultural Development by:

i. Aiming to achieve reduced levels of rural poverty in post-conflict societies and securing funding to do so;

ii. Suggesting the engagement of the International Fund of Agricultural Development’s ability to create long term and strategic partnerships with the G8, G20, and the World Economic Forum;

4. Considers the effective maximization of health benefits and promoting the essential human right to life, health and dignity within the community centers by:

i. Improving sanitation facilities in both schools and community centers;

ii. Providing access to a clean and secure supply of water;

iii. Promoting hygiene awareness;

b. Further developing the United Nations High Commissioner of Refugees initiative called Water, Hygiene and Sanitation Program through:

i. Implementing waste disposal educational programs in the community centers;

ii. Providing proper waste disposal technologies and strategies in these educational programs;

iii. Addressing gaps in the provision of water and sanitation services;

iv. Upgrading existing water and sanitation facilities;
5. Strongly suggests the close monitoring of the implementation of all humanitarian aid programs in the States of Jordan, Iraq, and Lebanon and all applicable post-conflict situations by:

a. Adapting the UNHCR’s already existing system of monitoring violations of human rights and processes of corruption to supervise transitional post-conflict societies;

b. Avoiding practices of corruption and ensuring transparency by:
   i. Working together with independent experts and existing Special Rapporteurs on Human Rights to conduct studies on human rights, states of emergency, and income distribution;
   ii. Recognizing Amnesty International’s ability to conduct not only individual but also joint reports on societal activity;

c. Suggesting that the Universal Periodic Review continue to monitor and supervise the implementation of laws and policies, and report on the best practices for the promotion and protection of human rights in post-conflict situations.
The Human Rights Council,

Recalling Security Council Resolutions 1261 of 25 August 1999, 1265 of 17 September 1999, 1296 of 19 April 2000, and 1314 of 11 August 2000, as well as all other resolutions that call for equal participation of all groups of society in decision-making processes in countries that have recently been shattered by a period of severe conflict,

Recalling further Articles 1 and 2 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights that state that all men and women are born free and equal in rights and dignities,

Bearing in mind the principles of the Charter of the United Nations and the declared purpose of the Human Rights Council under the Charter for the promotion and protection of fundamental human rights to all persons,

Affirming that the strength of all people is measured by the well-being of its most vulnerable members,

Convinced that every society should guarantee equal access to all its members while establishing political processes after a conflict,

Recalling the Yogyakarta Principles that state that every person has the right to equal access to education and political participation and further stresses that it is of tremendous importance to specifically include vulnerable groups into the decision-making process in post-conflict societies,

Acknowledging that vulnerable groups face challenging circumstances and require assistance, even in times of social unity, in order to protect the rights of these people,

Recalling the UN Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples, which affirmed that the indigenous population is equal to all,

Stressing the need to improve the role of vulnerable groups in decision-making processes with regard to conflict prevention and rebuilding of post-conflict affected societies,

Recalling the third session of the United Nations Permanent Forum on Indigenous Issues, which affirmed that native people do not have the ability to take part in decision making during both times of war and peace,

Acknowledging that throughout conflicts and the periods that follow thereafter vulnerable groups are significantly more susceptible to abuses from both warring factions in conflict societies,

Noting the necessity that Member States make adequate financial decisions in order to protect vulnerable groups from fundamental human rights violations,

1. Emphasizes that Member States in post-conflict periods ensure diverse representation within the education and political system;

2. Encourages all Member States to design an effective educational system including the provision of professional training for teachers, with the aim of preventing prevailing inner-societal conflicts;

3. Recommends training programs for teachers in post-conflict societies in order to mitigate inner-societal conflict by:
a. Working collectively on measures to design an effective education by strengthening existing platforms such as The Forum on Minority Issues that encourage multilateral dialogue;

b. Ensuring the provision of professional training for teachers;

c. Supporting local governments in the effort of increasing political and decisional involvement of vulnerable groups;

d. Cooperating with established United Nations institutions such as UNESCO and UNICEF;

4. Invites Member States to increase participation as well as political and social empowerment for all vulnerable groups, by providing them with:

   a. Leadership training that will give them the skills necessary to attain head roles in government, business, and other areas of society;

   b. Legal clinics where vulnerable groups learn about avenues of legal recourse to defend their fundamental human rights;

   c. Civic education programs by collaborating with already existing NGO’s to empower political involvement among vulnerable groups;

5. Recommends Member States to reconsider laws, regulations, and practices that prevent and restrict participation of vulnerable groups in the political process so as to ensure their adequate representation in the transitional process;

6. Encourages the establishment of a framework designated to structure and enhance cooperative efforts amongst post conflict countries, NGO’s, and existing UN agencies in order to:

   a. Facilitate the exchange of knowledge and expertise on protecting vulnerable groups;

   b. Coordinate ongoing endeavors by existing institutions such as the Forum on Minority Issues;

   c. Urge all actors to allocate more financial resources into the empowerment of vulnerable groups similar to the example of the United States Agency for International Development program.
The Human Rights Council,

Recalling articles 1 and 2 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR), which declare that all people are entitled to the same universal rights regardless of sex or gender,

Further recalls article 3 of the International Covenant of Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR), which states that women should be ensured the same political and civil rights as those allotted to men,

Emphasizing the importance of the Convention on the Elimination on all Forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW) which condemns discrimination against women and affirms women’s rights to education, economic stability, political participation, and social life,

Reiterating the General Assembly (GA) resolution 66/130, which encourages spreading awareness and recognition of the importance of women’s participation in the political processes in the national and international communities, and the Security Council Resolutions 1325 and 1889, which focuses on the important role and positive impact of women in promoting sustainable peace and security as well as recognizes women’s valuable contribution to peacebuilding within societies,

Bearing in mind the importance of the Resolution 27/24, which emphasizes the human rights of women to participate in the political sector and to have equal access to positions of power and government as that of men,

Taking into consideration the definition of a post-conflict society according to the Civil War and Post Conflict Reconstruction of Africa as, “populations belonging to countries that have recently emerged from war or large-scale violence”,

Deeply concerned with the status of women in post-conflict societies who are subject to physical and sexual violence, a lack of health, education, and infrastructure, and who are denied or discouraged from partaking in the political sector,

Acknowledging the model provided by the Bangladesh Rural Advancement Committee (BRAC), which is dedicated to relieving poverty within impoverished societies through its microfinance program that addresses vulnerable groups including women in post-conflict societies seeking long-term financial stability,

Observing that the reconstruction of post-conflict societies begins in the home and the community, and noting with satisfaction the training and empowerment of women through the French NGO program Agency for Technical Cooperation and Development (ACTED) that seeks to attain a skill-based approach that would work to achieve gender equality,

Fully aware of the objectives out in the Beijing Platform for Action issued in 1995 to aid women in achieving gender equality by deconstructing obstacles that deter them from fully realizing their rights within the economic, social, political, and decision-making sectors,

Noting with appreciation the work of the UN-Women Fund for Gender Equality and its success in supporting high-impact programs throughout 72 countries which promote the economic and political empowerment of women, as well as the Equal Futures Partnership funding program, which serves as a catalyst for women’s finance,

Recognizes the Universal Periodic Review (UPR) as an important tool to monitor the status and respect of human rights in all of the Member States, including those living in post-conflict societies, Observing the work done by the Africa Platform of building state-civil society relations in post conflict societies which have the purpose of empowering women by giving them a more direct voice in their respective governments,

Recalls Resolution 27/L.24, which focuses on the importance and relevance of the civil society in the political and judicial sector for the purpose of achieving human rights in the international community as well as within post-conflict societies,

Encouraging the further development of the Women Peace Building Initiative, to enable Civil Society Organizations (CSO) in post-conflict societies to be empowered through the expansion of health, education and economic opportunities,

Taking into consideration the Rome Statue's gender provision that recognizes rape, sexual slavery, forced prostitution, forced pregnancy, forced sterilizations, gender-based persecutions, trafficking of persons particularly of women and children, and sexual violence as crimes against humanity, war crimes, and in some instances genocide,

Underlining the contribution of the UN Peacebuilding Commission and Troop Contributing Country to women’s empowerment as well as facilitating necessary peace and stability for the promotion and protection of Human Rights through installing female workers within the organization to help other women feel more comfortable with troops of their same sex,

Calling attention to the necessity of education for young girls in post-conflict societies through international organizations such as the United Nations Girls Education Initiative (UNGEI), which implements programs for young women and girls thus reducing the gender gap,

Further recalling the contribution to women’s empowerment at young ages of the Global Business Leaders Launch Girls’ Education Task Force (GBLLGE), which has the purpose of dismantling barriers of education for women and young girls that are discriminated against by offering improved education to girls in post-conflict societies,

Taking note of the success of the Sport for Development and Peace (SDP) strategies in many Member States and regions including Kosovo, Columbia, Israel, Brazil, Sierra Leone, Sri Lanka, South Africa, Jordan, Northern Ireland, and France, Confident in the ability of sport to attract individuals in post-conflict societies to come together to first, play sports and form relationships and second, be taught important principles, such as respecting women and upholding their rights,

Noting with satisfaction the success that UN-Women has achieved with the HeForShe-campaign in raising awareness of gender issues in popular media, and in promoting the rights of women as a cause every person, no matter gender, should involve itself constructively in,

Acknowledging the gender-related school-based violence as a pressing issue as reported in the School-Related Gender-Based Violence is Preventing the Achievement of Equality Education for All, a document by the United Nations Educational Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), the UNGEI, and the Education for All-Global Monitoring Report’s (EDA-GMR),

1. Congratulates BRAC for designing a model that tackles global poverty and ultimately aids an estimated number of 135 million people as well as for their special emphasis on empowering women socially and financially through BRAC’s system of microfinance loans;

2. Supports an international expansion of BRAC to introduce a sector dedicated specifically to women in post-conflict societies or women in societies at risk of failing which would focus on:
   a. Funding microfinance loans in order for women to have access to basic human rights in post-conflict societies by giving women in these societies means to start small business and become self-sufficient;
b. Establishing opportunities for women to partake in sectors of life which otherwise would discriminate against women, including political, social, and economic sectors;

c. Providing health services to women in post-conflict societies;

d. Continuing to monitor microfinance institutions in order to guarantee receipt of funds by beneficiaries;

3. Encourages Member States, the UN-Women’s Fund for Gender Equality, and the Equal Futures Partnership to assist women in participating in elections and government of post-conflict societies by monitoring elections in post-conflict societies as well as trains women to participate in the political sector and government elections;

4. Invites nations to cooperate with ACTED, which operates in 35 different countries attempting to repair and sustain gender equality by:

   a. Creating programs that provide women with the training to develop the necessary skills and means to establish the home based livelihood as previously done in nations such as Pakistan in the wake of conflict in Afghanistan, actualizing long-term sustainable female empowerment;

   b. Coordinating and enhancing continually expanding employment of women by ACTED in their teams, separate community committees and specialized activities such as home-based cash-for-work;

5. Suggests that the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights, dedicates a specific chapter to the status and needs of women within these societies within the Universal Periodic Review, including:

   a. Reports that address the issue of women’s political participation and economic rights in post-conflict societies;

   b. Comments submitted under the review process by willing NGO’s and other CSO’s which contribute to women’s empowerment;

   c. National reports as a tools to address the issue of women’s political participation and economic rights in a constructive manner, and to draw attention to areas where technical support is needed;

6. Seeks the aid of organizations such as UN Women to create platforms to open dialogue following the example of the Africa Platform in the creation of spaces for discussion and negotiation between women, other civil society groups, and the government on the topics of:

   a. Inclusion of women in the political system;

   b. Protection of human rights and women’s rights within the parameters of rule of law and peace building;

   c. Enhancement of mechanisms for the participation of women in local politics and elections;

7. Encourages Member States to consider following the example of the Rome Statute’s gender provision in order to strengthen the transparency and justice for survivors of sexual crimes such as rape, sexual slavery, forced prostitution, forced pregnancy, gender-based persecutions, trafficking of persons particularly of women and children, as well as the protection of their human rights;

8. Recommends that Member States offer assistance to women discriminated in the political sector as well as women survivors of sexual and gender-based violence in post-conflict societies by promoting and supporting pre-existing centers for women and creating Multi-Sectorial Aid Centers for Women in those Member States where aid or assistance is not available, which would offer:

   a. Social and psychological evaluations;
b. Medical check-ups;
c. Social and legal services;
d. Employment aid;
e. Self-defense classes;
f. Shelter;

9. Further Recommends that these centers be a place where women will have the freedom to express their opinions, become informed as well as involved in politics through debates, conferences and educational campaigns without the fear of discrimination based on gender;

10. Encourages UN-Women to assist post-conflict societies with their elections through the template of the Women’s Campaign International by:
   a. Directing funds to organizations that directly deal with women participating in elections;
   b. Assisting in dismantling barriers for women partaking in elections within post-conflict societies;

11. Emphasizes the need for post-conflict societies to promote and implement gender-sensitive policy reforms in collaboration and with the guidelines of UN-Women, the United Nations Trust Fund to End Violence against Women, and the UN Peacebuilding Commission and Troop Contributing Country that will:
   a. Create a safer living environment for women and girls;
   b. Encourage women to lodge complaints and to join the police;

12. Suggests that this gender-sensitive police reform be conducted through the:
   a. Implementation of training for national police on how to prevent, detect, and address gender-related violence and redirect women subject to sexual violence towards relevant organizations or NGOs that offer assistance including psychological help and health care;
   b. Creation of dedicated police departments within police stations to address specifically crimes against women such as sexual violence, human trafficking, domestic violence, and forced prostitution;
   c. Establishment of mobile national police units that includes a psychological support for gender-based violence that will reach remote places to inform people about their rights and enable women to report offenses;
   d. Increasing the number of all-female police units in areas where there is alarming gender-based violence offences;

13. Encourages a gender-sensitive perspective in peacebuilding advised by the guidelines of UN-Women through:
   a. Training of peacekeepers in order for them to be able to detect, prevent, respond, and address gender-related violence;
   b. Publishing clear statements from peacekeeping officials which express that gender-violence will not be tolerated and will be strictly punished;
   c. Extending the 2014 goal of Secretary General Ban Ki Moon to increase the number of female peacekeepers to 20 percent female to the year 2020;
d. Consideration of specific needs of female ex-combatants in DDR processes;

14. Suggests an expansion of organizations such as UNGEI and GBLLGE to include educational programs for young girls in post-conflict societies with the purpose of tearing down discriminatory barriers for women in political sectors and for equipping young women with the tools to equally partake in the political system;

15. Recommends that the educational programs for young girls in post-conflict societies modeled after organizations such as the UNGEI and the GBLLGE include curriculum with the purpose of:
   a. Raising awareness on the benefit of women in politics;
   b. Enabling young girls to be self-sufficient;
   c. Providing the tools for girls to be equipped for participation in the political sector in the future;

16. Encourages ECOSOC, UNGEI, and EDA-GMR to advise post-conflict societies in implementing the programs of the School-Related Gender-Based Violence is Preventing the Achievement of Equality Education for All in order to establish strong educational infrastructure for young girls in early stages of state development, including:
   a. Facilitation of opportunities for young girls to attend schools safely by monitoring violence in the school;
   b. Monitoring of sanitation within schools to protect health and safety;
   c. Incorporation of political and government-based topics within school curriculum in order to increase confidence among women in the context of equal participation in politics;
   d. Inclusion of curriculum regarding the positive impact of women in politics and the human right to equal participation in politics;

17. Recommends that the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW) have an advisory role within post conflict governments to advocate for the election of women in State government roles;

18. Requests the Special Rapporteur on violence against women, its causes and consequences, Ms. Rashida Manjoo, to execute a study on the effectiveness of SDP in educating boys and girls about universal human rights in post-conflict societies, and more specifically investigating the education concerning women’s rights, through individual case studies and more global statistics studies done in post-conflict societies that work with NGOs and international governmental organizations (IGO)s that use the SDP approach;

19. Encourages Member States, NGOs, and intergovernmental organizations that use the SDP approach, in reference to the success of SDP programs in the aforementioned countries, to express solidarity and unite under the imperative need to support women’s rights in post-conflict societies and to further develop their programs;

20. Encourages the promotion of women’s rights and the inclusion of men in the ultimate goal of women’s empowerment as executed by programs such as the HeForShe-campaign;

21. Supports the involvement of UN Women in empowering women by aiding them in attaining their human rights and fundamental freedoms in the international community including post-conflict societies;

22. Expresses hope about the increasing of women’s involvement in the political area and noting the positive effect that is has on gender equality, respect of human rights, and sustainable peace;

23. Notes the importance of women in positions of power for the establishment of a lasting and progressive democratic society.
The Human Rights Council,

Keeping in mind that the Charter of the United Nations establishes the guiding principle that the international community shall promote and protect the human rights for all peoples, including inter alia the right to security, the right to an adequate standard of living, and the right to truth,

Guided by the rights laid out within the International Bill of Human Rights, including the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR), the International Covenant on Economic, Social, and Cultural Rights (ICESCR), and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR), Reaffirming the UNDHR article 7 stating all people are equal before the law free of discrimination,

Reconfirming UNDHR articles 8 and 10 ensuring the right to competent national tribunals for violations of fundamental rights and the entitlement to public hearings by independent tribunals,

Understanding the unique needs and struggles that face vulnerable populations in their enjoyment of human rights, as laid out within the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action and the UN’s Common Understanding of 2003,

Concerned by the lack of fulfillment of the obligations laid out within the Monterrey Consensus on Financing for Development, as well as the lack of capacity for post-conflict societies to rebuild and revitalize after conflict, and provide basic human rights,

Reaffirming the need for collaboration and coordination between Member States and Non-Governmental Organizations in order to promote and protect human rights, as stressed within Human Rights Council’s Resolution 22/15,

Recognizing the preliminary framework for the post 2015-development agenda and the impediments to universal fulfillment of the Millennium Development Goals (MDG’s), especially MDG’s 1 and 2 regarding active international disbursement of humanitarian aid, as discussed at the UN World Conference on Human Rights,

Applauding the inclusive work of the Open Working Group on the Post-2015 Development Agenda and their proposed Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) all of which will work to promote and protect human rights for current and future generations,

Acknowledging the importance of establishing rule of law in post conflict societies to ensure peace and stability,

Recognizing General Assembly Resolution A/RES/69/195 concerning the all-encompassing nature of rule of law, crime prevention and criminal justice, and development,

Emphasizing the importance of cooperation within the international community to develop best practices for establishing rule of law in post conflict societies,

Taking into account that, without rule of law, post conflict societies face the perpetuation of criminally and politically motivated violence contributing to the possible continuation of warring parties,

Recognizing that national judicial bodies must be strengthened to uphold rule of law in post conflict societies,

Stressing once again the vital impact and efforts of peacekeeping and peacebuilding missions in the repair of post conflict societies especially when appropriate funding is provided as reaffirmed by General Assembly Resolution A/RES/55/235, advocating proper oversight when providing aid to post conflict societies,
Fully Aware that the disarmament, demobilization, and reintegration (DDR) in post conflict societies are crucial components to both the short-term and long-term development of post conflict societies and protection of human rights within it,

Acknowledges that the effective exercise of the right to freedom of opinion and expression, as enshrined in the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, is essential for the enjoyment of other human rights and freedoms universal, indivisible, interdependent and interrelated,

Noting the initiatives undertaken by State and non-State actors to provide humanitarian aid to all Member States of the international community, especially those in a post-conflict society,

Considering the Progress report on the research-based report of the Human Rights Council Advisory Committee on best practices and main challenges in the promotion and protection of human rights in post-disaster and post-conflict situations (A/HRC/27/57), which outlines the need for increased transparency and accountability and the need to bear in mind cultural norms of societies, all of which are important to promoting and protecting human rights in post-conflict societies,

Further considering the principles in HRC resolution A/HRC/27/57, which also outlines the need for accountability mechanisms to ensure the enforcement of regulatory frameworks and to avoid abuses in political and electoral processes and financial reports of political parties,

Noting with interest the Report of the Special Rapporteur on the promotion and protection of the right to freedom of opinion and expression (A/HRC/26/30), which recommends that measures be taken to ensure transparency and accountability by Member States to protect and promote these rights,

Reaffirming Human Rights Council Resolution 22/26 which focuses on finding ways to improve the relief, recovery, and reconstruction effort for every Member State,

Guided by General Assembly Resolution A/HRC/RES/9/10, which emphasizes the importance of a holistic approach to transitional justice and the necessity to uphold human rights when implementing this justice in order to include marginalized groups,

Recognizing the Report of the Secretary General on the rule of law and transitional justice in conflict and post-conflict societies (S/2004/616), which correlates how transitional justice ties into pursuing justice for human rights violations through ensuring accountability and achieving reconciliation,

Taking into consideration the recommendations of the Report of the Secretary General on peace building in the immediate aftermath of conflict (A/63/881-S/2009/304), which outlines recurring peace building priorities that are pertinent to guaranteeing the promotion and protection of human rights in post-conflict societies, including but not limited to strengthening rule of law, disarmament, demobilization and reintegration, and security sector reform,

Recognizing the right to proper sanitation and water facilities in post-conflict societies in order to improve standards of living, as outlined in the United Nation’s Environmental Program’s Water and Post-Conflict Peacebuilding and as further emphasized within the proposed Sustainable Development Goal (SDG) 6,

Emphasizing Article 6 of the ICESCR, which discusses right to decent work and the necessity for Technical, Vocational, and Education Training (TVET) as a necessary mechanism for the promotion of human rights,

Recalling the right of Member States to utilize of their natural resources as they see fit, in line with the ICESCR and the ICCPR, and the economic benefits that will occur in post-conflict societies through these measures, Guided by the UN-Habitat’s Right to Adequate Housing, which cites the importance of sustainable permanent housing as well as access to emergency shelter in times of crisis,

Concerned by the destruction of basic infrastructure that occurs during conflict and the need for revitalization of essential infrastructure for the provision of human rights mechanisms, as outlined within the Brussels Programme of Action on Least Developed Countries,

Noting the vital role that foreign direct investment (FDI) plays within economic revitalization to ensure the promotion of human rights in post-conflict societies, as outlined in the Report of the Secretary General on peacebuilding in the immediate aftermath of conflict,

Understanding the importance of the promotion of economic independence and the right to work through youth employment as outlined within the Economic and Social Council Resolution 2006/15, especially as it relates the Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration (DDR) process of post-conflict societies,

Recalling Resolution 63/210, the Statute of the International Renewable Energy Agency, Articles of Agreement of the International Monetary Fund, and Articles of Agreement of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, which all address access to energy, an essential component in the promotion of the human rights to development outlined within the ICESCR,

Highlighting the right to economic development, as enshrined within the ICESCR and General Assembly Resolution A/RES/67/202, entitled Entrepreneurship for Development, which emphasizes the need for economic opportunities for new businesses in order to reduce poverty and promote economic independence,

Understanding the need for access to healthcare for all populations, particularly in regards to HIV/AIDS prevention and treatment, as outlined in the Economic and Social Council’s (ECOSOC) Resolution 2009/6 and enshrined within the UDHR article 25,

Noting the need for women’s empowerment as noted in the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and S/RES/21/43,

Emphasizing importance of access to assistance for survivors within post-conflict societies to promote combating gender inequality and encouraging access to justice for survivors of violence within conflict, as emphasized in A/RES/40/34 and A/RES/60/147,

1. Encourages strengthening the rule of law within post conflict societies through:

   a. Utilization of the International Institute of Justice and Rule of Law (IIJ) which provides training to criminal justice institutions of Member States seeking to form partnerships with the IIJ to counter terrorism and transnational criminal activity by:

      i. Providing law based training to lawmakers, police, judges, prosecutors, correction officials and other justice sector stakeholders to address issues in a rule of law framework;

      ii. Attendance of able and willing Member States to educational forums in the afore mentioned fields of the IIJ to gain international consensus on rule of law;

      iii. Funded through pledged contributions by founders and partners of the IIJ in addition to those committed by international, regional and nongovernmental organizations;

   b. Expanding the knowledge of rule of law and best practices of implementation in post conflict societies through the International Network to Promote Rule of Law (INPROL), a global online community of rule of law practitioners in collaboration with national and local government while respecting traditional and cultural values in order to maintain state sovereignty;

2. Suggests the improvement of access and proliferation of the Rule of Law Coordination and Resource Group’s, of which the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights is member to, database of law materials, best practices and management of web resources on rule of law to aid post conflict societies in their establishment of rule of law;

3. Welcomes the United Nations Department of Political Affairs’ regional divisions to monitor political developments forming analytical reports addressing areas to strengthen national structures having direct impacts on rule of law;

4. Encourages the implementation of DDR by the United Nations Office for Disarmament Affairs and the United National Disarmament, Demobilization and Reintegration Resource Center (UNDDR) within post conflict societies deemed eligible and willing by the UNDDR standards to:

   a. Ensure both long and short term security and stability through integration of combatants socially and economically in societies;

   b. Removal of ex-combatants from military structures while accounting for the loss of livelihoods or support networks;

   c. Reduce weapon proliferation to support peacemaking processes;

5. Encourages utilization of bilateral partnerships of Member States to provide aid in the development of legitimate and equal legal intuitions, similar to the United States Agency for International Development’s (USAID) Democracy Human Rights and Governance program, which adhere to international human rights standards and thereby reinforce rule of law;

6. Encourages the establishment of local peace centers established through bilateral initiatives to educate people of post conflict areas, as seen in 2008 in Rwanda, to facilitate regional peacebuilding and education via cooperation between Member States funded and established by international organizations such as the Institute of Peace;

7. Invites the continued implementation of rule of law to strengthen national intuitions and for the inclusion of rule of law, criminal justice and crime prevention in the post-2015 development agenda to continue improvements for post conflict societies;

8. Reaffirms its belief in the importance of the rule of law promoting justice and accountability for the protection of human rights in post conflict societies;

9. Strongly invites UN funds and bodies such as the UN Democracy Fund, UN Peacebuilding Fund, and UNESCO to provide the necessary resources to promote and protect transparency and accountability regarding capacity-building measures in Member States in a post-conflict society as follows:

   a. Regulating the submission of periodic financial reports of parties, political organizations and candidates, requiring full disclosure of all resources collected (in monetary form or in kind), and these finance reports should be available to public and subject to sanctions for inadequate disclosure;

   b. Pushing for the transparency of media ownership and political campaigns to prevent further infringement of human rights in those Member States that wish to hold campaigns;

   c. Guaranteeing that electoral authorities or independent oversight bodies receive sufficient financial and human resources, and enforcement powers, in order to accomplish their duties adequately making all political entities accountable for irregularities including all forms of abuse of political;

10. Encourages the United Nations Department of Political Affairs’ (UNDPA) Electoral Assistance Division to coordinate with willing and able Member States that are considered to be in post-conflict situations to work with the UN to efficiently establish election provisions and provide voting resources:
Recognizing that proper election procedures should be equitable in accessibility to the resources and independent of outside monetary contributors by ensuring that:

i. Government election procedures are the most equitable possible relative to that state’s desired form of government;

ii. There is sufficient communication between elected officials and constituents within the State;

iii. People within the Member States may assemble without facing any government ramifications due to being internally marginalized;

b. Suggesting that the aforementioned willing Member States facilitate mock-elections in schools to encourage voting practices in the Member States that wish to move towards a democratic form of government;

11. Expresses hope the UN to provide resources similar to those of the UN Organization Stabilization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (MONUSCO) to register voters in States that wish to establish a democratic form of government so that elections are held in the most efficient manner possible to avoid relapse into conflict;

12. Encourages the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to include human rights education in training, security officials and policing units that provide a significant portion of logistical and technical support to authorities in post-conflict societies;

13. Believes that bodies, such as NGOs, private corporations, or Member States, that wish to contribute resources, such as food and clothing, should keep in mind the cultural and ethnic values of the civilians to promote sovereignty and independence;

14. Urges that agencies such as, but not limited to, the UNDPA coordinate with regional bodies to develop and implement mechanisms to strengthen the national and local judiciaries established in developing countries, especially those in a post-conflict society, in line with all relevant human rights documents;

15. Suggests that the United Nations Development Programme work with willing Member States to create a post-conflict reconstruction and development plan in order to improve timeliness, effectiveness, and coordination of activities in post-conflict countries and to lay the foundation for social justice and sustainable peace through:

a. Consolidating peace and preventing a relapse into violence;

b. Encouraging and fast-tracking planning and implementation of reconstruction activities;

16. Strongly recommends that all Member States that are considered to be in a post-conflict society consult with the ICTJ on establishing a national truth & reconciliation commission, which would address root causes, human rights abuses during conflict, in addition to providing justice in regards to these abuses;

17. Encourages that the local transitional justice processes, which contains judicial and non-judicial mechanisms including prosecution initiatives, guided by the United Nations, be improved upon by:

a. Educating local authorities on both local and international standards of human rights;

b. Ensuring transitional justice for all vulnerable groups with a special focus on violence against women during conflict;

c. Strengthening tools for access to justice in post-conflict societies by utilizing programs such as the OHCHR’s tool for Mapping the Justice Sector which focuses on ensuring that any victims of conflict have access to justice and reparations and assists in helping individuals assimilate to conflict and help them understand what happened during conflict;
18. Acknowledging the problem of Military Sexual Slavery and recommends remunerating the victims and prosecute the offenders, in order for the victims to gain peace in their minds and prepare for a more brighter future and utilize the International Center for Transitional Justice’s (ICTJ) role in training and advocacy to ensure local actors have the necessary skill set to work with victims of human rights violations;

19. Emphasizes that in order to avoid exploitation of a post-conflict societies weakened ability to protect their economic integrity, that there be increased transparency from assisting States, and:

   a. Declaring that volunteer donor Member States should not utilize the ability to provide fiscal assistance as political leverage over vulnerable Member States;

   b. Insisting that there be a multilateral approach to funding improvement projects by international, regional, and local bodies including:

      i. Monitoring systems based on the International Aid Transparency Initiative, to deliver the report to the public about the process of human right promotion;

      ii. The use of existing regional funding and coordination effectively in order to support the protection of human rights operations directly with respect to culture, religion, and sovereignty;

      iii. Supporting the inclusion of addressing compliance with all relevant signed and ratified human rights documents as monitored by the Universal Periodic Review;

20. Recommends that, in conjunction with NGOs, the World Bank, and Members of the United Nations Human Rights Council, funds will not be improperly used for purposes other than the following mentioned:

   a. The revamping of economic industries that will create more jobs thus providing more people the opportunity to work;

   b. Promoting the accessibility of education by building more schools, as well as other infrastructure deemed relevant by the State being assisted;

   c. Programs that advocate political participation of people in the following forms: participating as an active voting citizen, in campaigns, and taking office;

21. Welcome holding a United Nations international summit before 2020, with all willing heads of State attending the summit to sit in on seminars and forums to educate about transitional justice and discuss how to hold previous administrations accountable for past human rights violations in post conflict societies along with preventing future human rights violations in future post conflict societies:

   a. Recognizing that the mandate of the summit is to increase awareness and education for all attending states;

   b. The summit would be organized by the Human Rights Council;

   c. All willing Member States in the United Nations will be invited to joining the summit;

   d. Working in conjunction with the International Labor Organization (ILO), United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, United Nations Women Committee, and NGOs such as Amnesty International and Human Rights Watch;

   e. Invites all NGOs with consultative status to observe and take part in the summit;

   f. Iterates the need for attendance of representatives from regional organizations, such as the African Union, ASEAN, European Union, etc.;
22. Encourages post-conflict societies to utilize the United Nations Development Program’s Public Private Partnership for Service Delivery Programme in order to build infrastructure for basic social services such as, inter alia, housing, water and sanitation, healthcare, energy, economic opportunities, and employment through labor-intensive programs;

23. Recommends post-conflict societies utilize relevant entities, such as the UNEP-Sustainable Urban Housing Initiative (SUSHI), the Flat-Pack Ikea Shelters joint programme with the UNHCR, and the UNHCR’s Protection Cluster Working Group in order to find a sustainable solution to the right to housing within post-conflict societies, under the auspices of the UNHCR’s Housing, Land, and Property Rights Directorate;

24. Further Encourages regional cooperation to develop sustainable water and sanitation infrastructure in order to address unique needs through building capacity for infrastructure, modelled after projects such as the African Consortium for Infrastructure and the UN Peacekeeping’s Quick Impact Projects;

25. Recommends the Special Rapporteur on Waste Management pay special attention to the unique needs of post-conflict societies and report on any findings on gaps that need to be addressed therein;

26. Reaffirms the need for access to proper gender-sensitive sanitation facilities through the implementation of UN-Habitat’s WATSAN program within post-conflict societies;

27. Urges post-conflict societies to include the sentiments laid out in the Beijing Declaration and Programme of Action regarding assisting survivors of post-conflict societies such as psychological healthcare within their peacebuilding activities in order to ensure healing, access to justice, and reconciliation for all survivors of conflict;

28. Acknowledges the need for experienced healthcare professionals guided by the policies and best practices of the UN Permanent Forum on Indigenous Issues through better community training by the further implementation of programs such as:
   a. The World Health Organization’s (WHO’s) Global School Health Initiative;
   b. The WHO’s Health Academy;

29. Invites the UN Education Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO)’s Strategy for HIV/AIDS to investigate funding through such programs as the U.S. Presidents Emergency Plan for Aids Relief to expedite the creation of mobile clinics for HIV/AIDS and sexually-transmitted infections within post-conflict societies in order to increase access to healthcare for all peoples, especially hard to reach rural populations;

30. Suggests willing and able Member States to provide technical assistance and logistical support for energy infrastructure to post-conflict societies in order to strengthen and promote energy infrastructure practices;

31. Notes the need for increased access to reliable and sustainable energy within post-conflict societies, particularly in impoverished and rural communities through programs such as the UN-Energy’s Clean Start Programme;

32. Recommends post-conflict societies to build national capacities for sustainable and effective use of natural resources to increase community resilience, address poverty issues, and support peacebuilding by inviting UNEP’s Integrated Environment Programmes into their peacebuilding process in order to address the difficulty of accessing natural resources and economic opportunities;

33. Encourages the improvement of Technical, Vocational, and Education Training (TVET) within post-conflict societies through coordination between UNESCO’s TVET Initiative and the Department of Peacekeeping Operations’ Office of the Rule of Law and Security Institution in order to increase TVET opportunities for ex-combatants to expedite the Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration (DDR) aspect of peacebuilding;
34. Noting the need for employment for all people of working age, especially for youth who partake in a DDR process, through the strengthening of local labor market institutions’ capacities to integrate and operationalize national policy priorities through the UN Joint Programme on Youth, Employment, and Migration;

35. Suggests that post-conflict societies utilize the UN Conference on Trade and Development’s Empretec programme to promote access to new business opportunities and internships in order to ensure that everyone has the capacity to become economically independent, especially within post-conflict societies;

36. Urges the ILO to cater their Decent Work Country Program to meet the needs of post-conflict societies in order to ensure that all peoples have access to quality and equal employment;

37. Further recommends all Member States to sign and ratify relevant documents, such as the ILO’s Equal Remuneration Convention, the International Labour Organization (ILO)’s discrimination, employment, and occupation convention, as well as the Global Compact, which promote the right to a gainful, inclusive, and non-exploitative work environment;

38. Recommends that, in conjunction with NGOs, the World Bank, and Members of the United Nations Human Rights Council, funds will not be improperly used for purposes other than the following mentioned:

   a. The monetary resources shall go to the revamping of economic industries that will create more jobs thus providing more people the opportunity to work;

   b. The monetary resources shall go to promoting the accessibility of education by building more schools, as well as other infrastructure deemed relevant by the State being assisted;

   c. The monetary resources shall go to programs that advocate political participation of people in the following forms: participating as an active voting citizen, in campaigns, and taking office;

39. Encourages favorable business environments for FDI within Member States in order to promote economic diversification and make possible the increased economic independence of post-conflict societies, modeled after the strategically implemented government-subsidized diversification practices of the Chaebols Companies business model;

40. Encourages increased foreign direct investment within post-conflict societies through trust-building initiatives led by the OHCHR and UNDP’s joint program entitled Assisting Communities Together (ACT) in order to promote entrepreneurship and investment, which will assist post-conflict societies in peacebuilding and the provision of human rights mechanisms;

41. Further encourages post-conflict societies to utilize UNCTAD’s World Association of Investment Promotion Agencies, which will assist post-conflict societies in gaining FDI for the right to economic opportunities and development;

42. Urges all Member States to collaborate with relevant non-governmental organizations, especially those registered with ECOSOC and the HRC, in order to reduce redundancy in the development of human rights mechanisms, as well as to lift the burden of providing such services off of developing Member States;

43. Encourages peacebuilding commissions within post-conflict societies to ensure that all technical, financial, and logistical assistance for the promotion of human rights is mobilized in a manner that promotes national ownership and capacity development in line with the Accra Agenda for Action for the societal revitalization of post-conflict societies;

44. Expects the Third International Conference on Financing for Development, held in Addis Ababa, to address any and all concerns regarding financing for development and to produce a constructive outcome;

45. Urges all Member States to follow the guidelines within the Monterrey Consensus and the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action with particular attention paid to the importance of a human rights based approach to development through aid effectiveness, accountability, reliability, and transparency in order to build capacity and promote state building in post-conflict societies;

Noting the unique struggles faced by certain populations, especially in post-conflict societies, including women, children, indigenous peoples, internally displaced persons (IDPs), religious, cultural, and ethnic minorities, persons with disabilities, migrant workers, returnees, and refugees herein referred to as vulnerable populations;

Encourages all Member States to uphold the highest respect for human rights and sustainable peace, particularly those outlined within the International Bill of Human Rights regardless of their conflict status, and to provide assistance to fellow Member States.
The Human Rights Council,

Keeping in mind General Assembly resolution 64/292, which states that sanitary, safe and clean drinking water as a human right that is essential for the full enjoyment of life,

Referring to the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR) and a need for greater availability of clean drinking water, especially in post-conflict societies due to the direct correlation between water-stress, drought and conflict in post-conflict societies,

Considering that change in climate plays a crucial role in drinking water throughout the world,

Noting with approval the Member States commitment to peace and conflict resolution in the specific matter of water sharing, that is fundamental in order to guarantee people the right to water,

Recognizing access to water as a human right according to the UDHR and through several international treaties, including the 1979 Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW) article 14.2 and the 1989 Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC) Article 24,

Reaffirming support of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, and dedication to accomplishing the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs), Noting with concern that the successful accomplishments of all MDGs are contingent upon the way the international community addresses water scarcity globally,

Acknowledging that over 800 million people lack access to sanitary drinking water sources,

Having examined the publication of the “The Challenges of Restoring Governance in Crisis and Post-Conflict Countries” by Economic and Social Council, which states that there is a direct correlation between conflicts, drought, and post-conflict societies globally,

Recalling the United Nations Department of Economic and Social Affairs’ (UNDESA) World Water Development Report 4, which states that over half the world’s population will be living under high-water stress by 2030,

Recognizing the UN 2015 World Water Development’s warning that without international cooperation, the globe will have a 40 percent reduction of accessible water by 2030,

Further Recognizing the necessity of allocating subsistence agriculture technology and knowledge to post-conflict societies with respect to the basic human right to have access to food and water,

Reaffirming the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) in providing direction and promotion in human rights,

Acknowledging the post-2015 Development Goals,

Reemphasizing that cooperation among member states is crucial in order to improve human rights through water processes,

Recognizing the link between poor sanitation and disease, especially in rural communities with limited access to water infrastructure,
Considering the role of ongoing change of climate in protecting, securing and utilizing water resources at present and future times,

Acknowledging the importance of including short-term and long-term security and access to food in reference to UN initiatives, such as the World Food Program (WFP) in order to minimize the risk of return to violence in post-conflict societies,

Taking into consideration the past success of the Children’s Safe Drinking Water (CSDW), which initiated a program who worked with a diverse network of organizations to raise awareness of the clean water crisis and to provide clean water to people in need,

Taking into account post-conflict societies where implementing high-technology water solutions are not applicable low-technology solutions are strongly encouraged to allow those communities access to water,

1. Encourages the expansion of the UN Water program to specifically analyze and address the unique needs precipitated from post-conflict areas in an effort to provide the basic human right of access to potable water to those who are most vulnerable with respect to:
   a. Placing emphasis and urgency on post-conflict societies without access to potable water;
   b. Utilizing UN-Water Decade Programme on Capacity Development (UNW-DPC) as a research source for developing and maintaining highly productive and uniquely tailored initiatives pertaining to post-conflict victims;

2. Stresses that willing Member States work together to combat human rights violations through drought risk management by:
   a. Considering water supply infrastructures;
   b. Fostering sustainable technologies and practices, and;
   c. Successfully allocating water-related funding;

3. Invites the international community to utilize on-farm distribution systems, storm-water systems, and waste-water systems in order to provide people with the basic right of clean water;

4. Recommends Member States promote the advancement of human rights by implementing water conservation policy and drought risk management plans within their borders, such as:
   a. Early warning system on droughts;
   b. Response measures in order to deal with water-stress-related emergencies;
   c. Research initiatives in order to prevent future problems;

5. Encourages willing Member States to examine and consider previously successful water conflict resolutions, such as the Indus Water Treaty compromised between India and Pakistan;

6. Recommends further dialogue and cooperation amongst willing Member States and NGO’s in order to improve:
   a. Waste water treatment;
   b. Water desalination;
   c. Water distribution;
d. Water security;
e. Water filtration;

7. Encourages post-conflict societies to keep in mind the United Nations Environmental Program Clearing the Waters report, which focuses on restoring low-technology solutions and natural waterways in communities that have suffered from a lack of access to water due to conflict;

8. Urges the reimplementation of the water packet technology developed by the Children's Safe Drinking Water funded by the World Health Organization and the United Nations International Children’s Fund;

9. Draws attention to the Society for Ecological Restoration International (SER) that focuses on water retention and the introduction of water technologies into post-conflict areas so that human rights are met by ensuring all areas have access to water;

10. Recommends that subsistence agriculture be promoted in at risk post conflict rural areas, in order to decrease the likelihood of further conflicts emerging and ensuring access to food;

11. Encourages Collaboration with existing initiatives such as the United Nations Farming and Agricultural Organisation (UNFAO) or the One Acre Fund currently active in Kenya, Rwanda and Burundi, especially in terms of:

   a. Implementing educational modern educational techniques through the NGO’s;

   b. Distributing fertilizers;

   c. Training in drip irrigation and best farming practices;

12. Endorses promoting food security at risk local communities through mid-to long-term programs, by establishing local seed banks in partnership with the World Bank Initiative (WBI) in order to provide long term food security;

13. Encourages working with the Weather Index Insurance (WII) schemes for post-conflict societies, which promotes security and nutrition to rural farmers by managing short to mid-term risks, such as:

   a. Re-emergence of conflict in vulnerable communities, and

   b. Drought or other weather extremes that could potentially destroy crops;

14. Endorses increasing short-term nutritional support in post-conflict societies by taking measures, such as:

   a. Encouraging the World Food Program (WFP) to work on school feeding, which improves nutrition for school age children;

   b. Recommending an initiative with the Global Alliance for Increased Nutrition (GAIN) to specifically address nutrition in rural areas of post conflict societies.
The Human Rights Council,

Keeping in mind Article 26 of the Declaration of Human Rights, stating that all people have the right to education and it should be used for promoting the respect of fundamental freedoms,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 64/290 on the Right to Education During Emergencies, Resolution 8/4 taking special note of the Special Rapporteur on the Right to Education, and United Nations Security Council resolution 2143, which urges parties involved in armed conflict to respect schools of civilian use and protect them from attacks,

Noting with concern the disparities in education relating to equality, to ensure that all individuals have access to information that will empower them and allow them to promote change in their residing in countries regardless of origin,

Further recalling the points made in the document of Peace Education drafted by the United Nations Children’s Fund (UNICEF) in which they outline the importance of the knowledge and skills necessary to help guide the younger generation in creating conditions conducive to peace,

Bearing in mind the necessity of international cooperation and collaboration in the field of education whilst respecting the significance of state sovereignty as listed of Article 2 Section 2 of the UN Charter,

Fully aware of a possible correlation between the lack of available education and the recruitment of youth in armed militant factions by local belligerence, as noted in a study by the United Kingdom’s department for International Development,

Expressing the need to continue the focus on inclusive and equitable quality education when the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) end, especially by emphasizing the proposed Sustainable Development Goal (SDG) four,

Recognizing the extreme importance of the active involvement of Peacekeeping forces as noted in a 2006 University of Oxford study, which notes that doubling the expenditure to post-conflict states reduces the risk of reversion to conflict from 40 percent to 31 percent,

Acknowledging current inter-governmental organizations (IGOs) and non-governmental organizations (NGOs) success and ongoing progress of rehabilitating post conflicts societies,

Expressing its appreciation to IGOs NGOs that have worked in the affect areas to promote women’s rights regarding equal education,

Referring to the importance of international and regional mechanisms concerned with educational system on the implementation of education reform,

Keeping in mind that many countries that face conflicts tend to fall back into the source of the initial conflict within five years of its origination due to lack of sufficient support in their transition to peace,

Recalling the Convention on the Rights of the Child in which the numerous struggles that ex-combatants are mentioned, many of whom enter into conflict as children, face in the process of rehabilitation into their societies after a large scale conflict,
