Dear Delegates,

Welcome to the 2021 National Model United Nations New York Conference (NMUN•NY)! We are pleased to introduce you to our committee, the Security Council (SC). This year's staff is: Directors for SC Johanna Barton (Conference A) and Silvia Bedessi (Conference B), and Directors for SC-A Gamaliel Perez (Conference A) and Benjamin Wrigley (Conference B). Johanna holds a B.A. in European Studies from the University of Magdeburg and a M.Sc. in Public Sector Innovation and eGovernance of the University of Leuven. She currently works in the office of a German member of the European parliament. Silvia received her B.A. in Political Science and International Studies from the University of Florence. She currently works in the cultural field. Gamaliel completed his undergrad in Political Theory alongside International Relations. Gamaliel also hopes to publish a book in the future as a side project. Ben is studying for his master's degree in economic policy at the University of Siegen.

The topics under discussion for the Security Council are:

- I. The Situation in Yemen
- II. Impact of COVID-19 on Peace and Security
- III. Protection of Civilians in Armed Conflict

The Security Council is the international community's most powerful institution dedicated to maintaining peace and security. The Council may issue both binding and non-binding resolutions, release presidential statements, commission reports by the Secretary-General, and authorize peacekeeping or humanitarian missions, among other actions. The Council's unique legal authority and broad reach makes it the leader of the international community's efforts to maintain international peace and security.

This Background Guide serves as an introduction to the topics for this committee. However, it is not intended to replace individual research. We encourage you to explore your Member State's policies in depth and use the Annotated Bibliography and Bibliography to further your knowledge on these topics. In preparation for the Conference, each delegation will submit a Position Paper by 11:59 p.m. (Eastern) on 1 March 2021 in accordance with the guidelines in the Position Paper Guide and the NMUN•NY Position Papers website.

Two resources, available to download from the NMUN website, that serve as essential instruments in preparing for the Conference and as a reference during committee sessions are the:

1. NMUN Delegate Preparation Guide - explains each step in the delegate process, from pre-Conference research to the committee debate and resolution drafting processes. Please take note of the information on plagiarism, and the prohibition on pre-written working papers and resolutions. Delegates should not start discussion on the topics with other members of their committee until the first committee session.
2. NMUN Rules of Procedure - include the long and short form of the rules, as well as an explanatory narrative and example script of the flow of procedure.

In addition, please review the mandatory NMUN Conduct Expectations on the NMUN website. They include the Conference dress code and other expectations of all attendees. We want to emphasize that any instances of sexual harassment or discrimination based on race, gender, sexual orientation, national origin, religion, age, or disability will not be tolerated. If you have any questions concerning your preparation for the committee or the Conference itself, please contact the Under-Secretaries-General for the Peace and Security Department, Natalie Keller (Conference A) and Estefani Morales (Conference B), at usg.ps@nmun.org.

We wish you all the best in your preparations and look forward to seeing you at the Conference!

Sincerely,

Conference A

Committee Overview

Introduction

After the devastating effects of the two World Wars, the international community established the United Nations (UN) as an intergovernmental organization with the primary responsibility of maintaining international peace and security, creating the conditions conducive to economic and social development, and advancing universal respect for human rights.¹ The Security Council became one of the six principal organs of the UN and was given the primary responsibility of preserving international peace and security.²

The Security Council held its first session on 17 January 1946 at Church House in London.³ After its first meeting, the Council relocated to its permanent residence at the UN Headquarters in New York City.⁴ At that time, five permanent members and six non-permanent members were part of the Council.⁵ In 1965, the number of non-permanent members increased to 10 and discussions regarding a change in configuration took place frequently.⁶ As the body's structure has remained largely unchanged, debate has arisen over the Security Council's efficacy and authority as a mediator on issues of international security.⁷ Matters such as the Syrian Civil War, Russia's annexation of Crimea, and The Democratic People's Republic of Korea's nuclear weapons program have posed particular challenges to the Security Council.⁸

Traditionally, the Security Council discusses issues related to peacekeeping missions, political processes, as well as the protection of human rights, disarmament, and humanitarian crises.⁹ However, with the adoption of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development by the UN General Assembly in 2015, the Security Council has begun to increasingly focus on the intersection between sustainability, peace, and security.¹⁰ Some important crosscutting issues the Council is currently addressing include human rights and the protection of civilians for conflict prevention and sustainable development; Women, Peace and Security; and the prevention of conflict and sustaining peace.¹¹

Governance, Structure, and Membership

The Security Council is the only UN body that has the power to adopt legally binding resolutions, which place an obligation on Member States to accept and carry out the Council's decisions under Article 25 of the Charter of the United Nations (1945).¹² The Security Council also has a variety of other tools to address issues on its agenda.¹³ For example, the President of the Security Council may issue press statements or presidential statements to communicate the Council's position.¹⁴ Although these are not legally binding, such statements are used to bring attention to important issues and to recommend solutions to ongoing conflicts.¹⁵

The five permanent members of the Security Council are China, France, the Russian Federation, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, and the United States of America, often colloquially referred to as the “P5.”¹⁶ Every year, the General Assembly elects five of the 10 non-permanent members for a two-year term.¹⁷ Elections for non-permanent seats on the Council can be competitive, with states expressing interest and campaigning years in advance.¹⁸ States elected to serve on the Security Council are expected to represent the interests of their region; they usually have an influence at the international level and demonstrate leadership in specific areas of interest to their foreign policy.¹⁹ Each member of the Security Council has the ability to be represented at all meetings.²⁰ In the Provisional Rules of Procedure, Rule 13 allows for Members to be represented by an “accredited representative,” such as a Head of Government.²¹

Belgium, Dominican Republic, Estonia, Germany, Indonesia, Niger, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, South Africa, Tunisia, and Vietnam are the current non-permanent members for the 2020-2021 term.²² Security Council elections are held six months before the term starts in June.²³ This change allows Member States sufficient time to prepare for their new role.²⁴ The 10 non-permanent members represent countries from five groups: Africa, the Asia-Pacific Group, Latin America and the Caribbean, the Eastern European Group, and Western European and Other.²⁵

Every Member State of the Security Council has one vote.²⁶ Votes on all matters require a supermajority of nine Member States.²⁷ However, if one of the five permanent members of the Security Council votes “no” on a matter of substance, such as a draft resolution, it does not pass.²⁸ This is known as “veto power.”²⁹ In the 1950s, Security Council Member States made frequent use of their veto power, but its usage declined in the 1960s—rising again in the 1970s and 1980s.³⁰ In the last decades, the use of the veto power has been comparatively rare.³¹ In recent years, the Council has adopted many resolutions by consensus and has only been divided on a very limited number of issues.³²

Since 1993, the General Assembly has discussed several models to reform the Security Council.³³ The key challenges in the reform of the Security Council are its membership, transparency and working methods, and the veto power of the permanent five Member States.³⁴ Most recently, in a debate in November 2018, delegates of the UN General Assembly called for expanding the number of permanent members and abolishing the permanent member’s use of veto power.³⁵

Each member of the Security Council holds the presidency of the Council for one month, rotating according to alphabetical order.³⁶ Security Council meetings can be held at any time when convened by the President and by the request of any Member State.³⁷ Under Rule 3 of the Provisional Rules of Procedure of the Security Council, the President shall call a meeting if a dispute or situation requires the Council's attention.³⁸ Due to this, the Security Council meets regularly throughout the year in the UN Conference Building.³⁹ However, in 2020, due to the coronavirus disease (COVID-19), the Security Council have resorted to meeting online through video conferences.⁴⁰ Any Member State may attend the Council's sessions if the body decides to extend an invitation.⁴¹ Member States are invited if the Security Council is discussing an issue that directly concerns the interests of the Member State.⁴² Invited Member States do not have the right to vote but are allowed to submit proposals and draft resolutions.⁴³ Furthermore, invited Member States can inform the Council about a current crisis in their region.⁴⁴ However, such proposals may only be put to a vote at the request of a member of the Council.⁴⁵

The Security Council oversees many subsidiary bodies established under Article 29 of the Charter, including: the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, sanctions committees, and ad hoc committees.⁴⁶ The Security Council also works with the General Assembly to oversee the work of the Peacebuilding Commission (PBC).⁴⁷ Additionally, Security Council Member States participate in various working groups, which consist of some or all of the Security Council Member States and focus on regional issues, as well as improving the working methods of the Council itself.⁴⁸

Cooperation between the Security Council and other entities, such as the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons (OPCW) and the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) is significant.⁴⁹ Partnerships with independent regional organizations, such as the European Union (EU) and the African Union (AU) are also of paramount importance for addressing a broad range of issues such as terrorism, disarmament, nuclear non-proliferation, and extreme violence from non-state actors.⁵⁰

Mandate, Functions, and Powers

The mandate of the Security Council is to maintain international peace and security and to take action whenever peace and security are threatened.⁵¹ The Council's authority is particularly relevant with respect to the UN's four primary purposes, as specified in the Charter: maintaining international peace and security; developing friendly relations among nations; cooperating in solving international problems; and promoting respect for human rights.⁵² The capabilities of the Security Council are highlighted in Chapters V–VIII.⁵³ Chapter V establishes the structure, membership, functions, and powers of the Security Council.⁵⁴ Chapters VI and VII of the Charter specifically concern the Security Council and the range of actions that can be taken when settling disputes.⁵⁵ Chapter VI of the Charter by itself aims to settle disputes through peaceful means, such as negotiation and judicial settlement.⁵⁶ Chapter VII explores further actions that can be taken in regard to threats to peace, breaches of peace, and acts of aggression.⁵⁷ This chapter also authorizes the Security Council to implement provisional measures aimed to de-escalate the situation.⁵⁸ Chapter VIII of the Charter allows the Security Council to call upon other regional agencies or arrangements to enforce appropriate operations and intervene if necessary.⁵⁹

Under Article 41 in the Charter, the Council can call on its members to apply economic sanctions and other measures not involving the use of force to prevent or end violence.⁶⁰ Some of these measures include arms embargos, enforcing disarmament, or calling upon international criminal mechanisms to become active.⁶¹ Regarding diplomatic tools, the Council is mandated to investigate any dispute or situation that might lead to aggression between states, with other non-state groups, or within states' territories.⁶² The Council may also take military action against a state or other entity threatening international peace and security, and may further decide on the deployment of troops or observers.⁶³ The Council may also decide upon the deployment of new UN peacekeeping operations to be led by the Department of Peace Operations (DPO).⁶⁴ The Security Council creates a peacekeeping operation by adopting a resolution that outlines the mandate and size of a particular mission, and UN peacekeepers are assigned to appropriate regions to address conflicts.⁶⁵ The Council also cooperates with a number of international and regional organizations as well as non-governmental organizations to implement its decisions.⁶⁶

Recent Sessions and Current Priorities

By August 2020, the Security Council has covered a wide range of topics, issued 7 presidential statements, and adopted more than 32 resolutions⁶⁷ In general, the Security Council focuses efforts to consider country and region-specific situations in its agenda, as well as cross-cutting and thematic issues, such as threats to international peace and security, the financing of terrorism, and climate change, peace, and security.⁶⁸ In 2020, amongst others, the Council has drafted resolutions to address the humanitarian situation in Syria, peace and security in Africa, sexual violence in conflict, and threats to international peace and security caused by international terrorism and organized crime.⁶⁹

The conflict in Syria has led to over 5.6 million refugees and 6.1 internally displaced people.⁷⁰ Security Council resolution 2504, adopted 10 January 2020, and Security Council resolution 2533 on the situation in the Middle East, adopted 11 July 2020, call upon all parties to improve the humanitarian situation in Syria. This shall mainly be achieved by all parties complying to international law, and allowing safe access for humanitarian convoys to the regions defined in paragraphs 2 and 3 of Security Council resolution 2165 (2014).⁷¹

With regard to peace and security in Africa, the Security Council has reacted to the situation in the Central African Republic, the situation in Somalia, the situation concerning the Democratic Republic of Congo, and the situation in Mali.⁷² Mali, specifically, has been struggling with issues of safety of its citizens, ineffective governance, and economic and political instability, which has been exacerbated by nepotism and corruption in government.⁷³ In 2020, the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 2531, which renews the mandate of the United Nations Multidimensional Integrated Stabilization Mission in Mali (MINUSMA) until 30 June 2021. Furthermore, paragraph 28 provides a number of priority tasks that are to be realized within one year by the Mission and the Malian parties.⁷⁴

Since the adoption of landmark resolution 1325 on women, peace, and security in 2000 the Security Council has continuously addressed this issue.⁷⁵ Therefore in 2020, the year of the resolutions' 20-year anniversary, the Security Council again addressed the issue.⁷⁶ On 17 July 2020, the Special Representative of the Secretary General on Sexual Violence in Conflict Pramila Patten, and Special Envoy to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees Angelina Jolie addressed the Security Council in a debate on conflict-related sexual violence.⁷⁷ Special attention was brought to the lack of attention to “the plight of Yazidi women and children in Iraq, who were abducted, enslaved and tortured by the thousands by ISIL terrorists in 2014”⁷⁸, the problem of under-funding of efforts to fight sexual and gender-based violence, and the under-reporting on sexual violence against children in armed conflict.⁷⁹ The latter is closely linked to the general discussion of protecting children in armed conflicts.⁸⁰ In the past, the Security Council urged for a conflict prevention strategy to target the younger population and called upon other Member States to incorporate additional provisions in peace negotiations and agreements to protect the children.⁸¹ Resolution 2419 (2018) outlines the role of youth in conflict prevention.⁸² Security Council resolution 2250 on Youth, Peace and Security, adopted in 2015, highlights specific instances where youth participation and inclusion can occur, such as in civil and political engagement, humanitarian assistance, and civil society.⁸³ This will help integrate and enable young individuals in decision processes and promote international peace and security.⁸⁴ Most recently, through the unanimous adoption of resolution 2535 on 14 July 2020, the Security Council “underscored the role of youth in preventing and resolving conflict, as well as in building and maintaining peace, encouraging Member States to include young people in decision-making processes across these areas”.⁸⁵

In 2019, the Security Council adopted resolution 2482 (2019) on “threats to international peace and security caused by international terrorism and organized crime” and 2462 (2019) which outlined measures to suppress the financing of terrorism.⁸⁶ Resolution 2482 called upon Member States to enhance coordination towards a global response to international terrorism and organized crime.⁸⁷ The resolution also urges Member States to investigate and dismantle organized crime networks involved in trafficking, and to review and implement legislation on issues such as sexual and gender-based violence in armed conflict by ensuring that domestic laws and regulations are in line with Member States' obligations under international law.⁸⁸ Resolution 2462 calls for the UN Office of Counter-Terrorism (UNOCT) to play a leading role in identifying ways to suppress terrorist financing through expanding its focus and working closely with the Financial Action Task Force, an inter-governmental body that sets standards for combating money laundering and terrorist financing.⁸⁹ The Secretary-General, in his tenth report (S/2020/95), provided updates about the threats posed by the Islamic State in Iraq and the Levant (ISIL or Da'esh) in February 2020 to urge Member States to assist in efforts to counter the threat to international security and peace.⁹⁰

Conclusion

The Security Council is one of the main bodies of the UN that ensures international peace and security, overseeing the admission of new members to the UN General Assembly, and changes to the UN Charter.⁹¹ The Council also has a unique and impactful mandate to set norms and govern state actions, as all Member States are required to comply with the Security Council's legally-binding decisions under Chapter VII of the Charter, the only UN body to have legally-binding decisions.⁹² The Council is the only UN body that has the ability to create legally binding decisions.⁹³ Although the Security Council is first and foremost the primary UN entity responsible for the maintenance of international peace and security, the adoption of the post-2015 development agenda signaled the increasing need to also discuss the linkages between peace and security, and issues of human security and development.⁹⁴ The Council has begun looking at the intersection between the SDGs and international peace and security, namely through discussion and debates on climate change.⁹⁵ The Security Council also continues to address regional and country issues, as well as thematic issues, such as climate change, terrorism, and gender.⁹⁶

Annotated Bibliography

Charter of the United Nations. (1945). Retrieved 20 September 2020 from: <http://www.un.org/en/charter-united-nations/index.html>

The Charter of the United Nations provides a thorough explanation on the powers, and functions authorized to the Security Council. For instance, the Charter outlines where the use of force is acceptable and how the council is structured to combat threats to international peace and security. As the fundamental principles of the Security Council are written down in the Charter, this document should be the first resource for delegates to consider. Article 27-32 of the Charter outlines the voting procedures of the committee and structure of how the committee conducts its business. Article 23, which sets the membership structure, and articles 23–26, which discuss its basic functions and powers, are important for understanding both the structure and function of the Security Council. addition, articles 27–32 explain the Council’s voting procedure and its overall structure. The Charter can also be particularly helpful for delegates in understanding the powers and limitations of the body. Delegates will find Chapters VI and VII most helpful when researching the mandate of the Security Council and proposing actions and solutions.

Published by the UN Department of Political Affairs, this document provides information on the work and decisions of the Security Council, including resolutions and presidential statements. The document primarily consists of tables on items that have been discussed by the Security Council, various requests by the Security Council, and mandates of different entities and operations that report to the Council. This report will help delegates by providing succinct and clear information on the recent actions taken by the Security Council on its various thematic issues. Additionally, delegates may find the tables providing the actual clauses of different Security Council resolutions particularly helpful to their research.

This is a useful recap of all the issues that the Security Council has addressed or currently still needs to resolve. The Security Council highlights for the previous years are also available. For a more detailed report, the Security Council also reports monthly updates. There are many charts and graphics depicting the activity of the Council within 2019, even detailing number of meetings, regional focuses, and decisions by geographical regions.

I. The Situation in Yemen

*“Yemen is the largest humanitarian crisis in the world, with more than 24 million people – some 80 per cent of the population – in need of humanitarian assistance, including more than 12 million children.”*⁹⁷

Introduction

Yemen, a small State on the southern tip of the Arabian Peninsula, was one of the many Middle Eastern countries to be part of the Arab Spring, which began in 2011.⁹⁸ The Arab Spring is a political movement that began in Tunisia, where the citizens of various Middle Eastern and North African (MENA) countries cited poor economic conditions, lack of employment and professional opportunities and rampant government corruption, and demanded the ousting of many long standing leaders from their respective countries.⁹⁹ Yemen, which is amongst the poorest countries in the world, was no exception, and in January 2011, Yemenis marched in the Capital of Sana’a demanding that their leader of thirty years, Ali Abdullah Saleh, step down.¹⁰⁰

After a year of unrest and violence, Saleh resigned due to the domestic and international pressure and was replaced by a transitional government led by his former vice president Abderabbu Mansour al-Hadi.¹⁰¹ In 2014, the balance of power was fundamentally shifted when Houthi Rebels, a Shiite minority with strong opposition to the transitional government, violently took control of the capital.¹⁰² This chain of events resulted in the creation, in 2015, of a military coalition of Arab States led by Saudi Arabia that intervened on behalf of the internationally recognized Yemeni government through the use of air strikes, blockades, ground troops and alliances with local groups — all of which dramatically increased the level of violence within the country.¹⁰³

To this day, the country remains enveloped in a violent civil war with no immediate end in sight.¹⁰⁴ In addition to the ongoing conflict, the COVID-19 pandemic has torn through the country and placed an even greater threat to an already vulnerable population.¹⁰⁵ According to recent published data, 80% of the Yemeni population requires some form of assistance, 1.1 million people have gotten cholera and 15 million Yemenis are at risk of starvation.¹⁰⁶ All of this has amounted to what the United Nations Office for the Coordination of Human Affairs (OCHA) has called the worst humanitarian crisis (known as a series of events that pose a dire threat to the general well-being, safety and security of a large group of people within a specified area) in the world.¹⁰⁷

International and Regional Framework

With the situation in Yemen nearing a decade since the initial unrest, the international and regional communities have come together numerous times with the intention of attempting to resolve the crisis.¹⁰⁸ The Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC), a political and economic alliance and forum for the Gulf Arab States on the Arabian Peninsula, met in 2011 and pressured Saleh to step down as Yemen’s leader.¹⁰⁹ Additionally, a road map called the Agreement on the Implementation Mechanism for the Transition

Process in Yemen in Accordance with the Initiative of the Gulf Cooperation Council, known as the GCC Initiative, was created to aid in the political transition of power in Yemen.¹¹⁰ This initiative was a six-part framework that defined the transition period, staged the transition into two parts, and created a mechanism to resolve disputes.¹¹¹ The GCC Initiative would see Saleh resign as president and for Al-Hadi, the current Vice President to lead a transitional unity government until presidential elections could be organized. Following presidential elections, a new constitution would be drafted with the input of all the parties involved thereby ending the conflict and peacefully transitioning Yemen into a new form of governance.¹¹²

The GCC Initiative served as a good theoretical transition framework, however, many parties in Yemen remained skeptical that Saleh's vice president would deliver the change they demanded, causing the violence to continue.¹¹³ The focus on the international community therefore pivoted from nation building to resolving the armed conflict, an area that the Security Council has been playing a leading role in.¹¹⁴ Due to the escalation in violence and the capture of the capital by rebels, the Security Council unanimously adopted Resolution 2140 (2014) under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations (1948).¹¹⁵ This landmark resolution has served as the basis of the international community's policy towards Yemen, calling upon the implementation of a political transition by all parties as laid out in the GCC Initiative, encouraging the continued political participation of women and youth groups and expressing concerns over the increased recruitment of children as soldiers while condemning terrorist actions in Yemen by groups such as Al Qaeda.¹¹⁶ The resolution also instituted a travel ban and asset freeze of designated individuals determined by the Security Council Sanctions Committee (2014) who pose a threat to the stability and peace of Yemen.¹¹⁷ Additionally, the Council requested the Secretary-General to establish a panel in consultation with the committee of up to four experts that would aid, analyze, report and support the sanctions committee in their efforts to implement the travel ban and asset freeze.¹¹⁸ In recent meetings, the Security Council has adopted resolution 2511(2020) that renewed the travel ban and freezing of funds alongside an extension of the mandate of the panel of experts to 2021.¹¹⁹

Despite these efforts, the civil war in Yemen continues, with the warring parties having reached a stalemate.¹²⁰ Due to the precarious conditions faced by civilians within the country, the United Nations (UN) and the international community have urged the parties to negotiate a ceasefire agreement.¹²¹ In 2018, discussions between the two groups were held in Sweden and the Stockholm Agreement was reached.¹²² It aims for a ceasefire in key Yemeni ports and the creation of a humanitarian corridor so that the basic needs of the Yemeni civilians can be addressed. However, there have been issues implementing the Stockholm Agreement and new negotiations overseen by Saudi Arabia between the transitional government and the rebels have resulted in new efforts to implement a new ceasefire through the Riyadh Agreement.¹²³ The Riyadh Agreement serves as a new negotiation breakthrough that seeks to establish a joint coalition that shares the power between the government and the rebel forces.¹²⁴

Role of the International System

Since the start of the conflict, several entities of the UN and a number of other parties have remained engaged on issues related to the situation in Yemen including: security, the humanitarian crisis, human rights, and the plight of children.¹²⁵ The Security Council, which established the aforementioned sanctions committee, also adopted resolution 2216 (2015) on “The Situation in the Middle East” which created an arms embargo, limiting the sale and transfer of weapons to designated individuals and groups.¹²⁶ The Security Council has also extended the mandates related to the asset freeze and travel bans as well as the arms embargos through resolutions 2266 (2016), 2342 (2017), and 2402 (2018).¹²⁷ In 2018, when the two parties agreed upon the Stockholm Agreement, the Council adopted resolution 2452 (2019) on “The Situation in the Middle East” which created a special political mission that would oversee the implementation of the agreement.¹²⁸ In resolution 2481 (2019), the Council extended the mandate of the mission to further ensure that the ceasefire agreement is upheld.¹²⁹ In recent deliberations, the Security Council has adopted resolution 2534 (2020) that renewed the mandate of the United Nations Mission to support the Hodeidah Agreement (UNMHA) to July of 2021.¹³⁰ The UNMHA is the special mission created to support the implementation of the agreements on the city of Hodeidah and the pillars of the Stockholm Agreement.¹³¹

In response to resolution 2216, in 2015, the internationally recognized Al Hadi government requested the aid of the UN in verifying the contents of ships entering Yemeni ports that were not under its direct control.¹³² Under the UN Office for Projects Services (UNOPS), the UN Verification and Inspection Mechanism for Yemen (UNVIM) was created which allows for the flow of goods for commercial vessels that have received a clearance of their cargos destined for Yemen.¹³³ Based in Djibouti, UNVIM reviews applications for clearance and periodically checks the cargos of suspicious vessels that applied for clearance.¹³⁴ The mechanism seeks to deter the flow of various sanctioned goods, arms and people as defined by the Council.¹³⁵

Additionally, the office of the Secretary-General has made Yemen a priority, and has been supporting the political transition since 2012, when it created the Special Envoy to Yemen as requested by the Security Council in resolution 2014 (2011) on “The Middle East”.¹³⁶ The Secretary-General also reports on the situation in Yemen and provides updates as requested by the Council.¹³⁷ Recent reports published have discussed children and armed conflict, the implementation of Security Council resolution 2451 (2018) on “The Situation in the Middle East”, and the humanitarian crisis caused by the internal conflict.¹³⁸ In 2018, the Secretary-General appointed Martin Griffiths, the new Special Envoy to Yemen, to continue negotiation efforts with the various political groups to establish a lasting peace to the Yemeni crisis.¹³⁹ The Special Envoy delivers monthly briefings on the situation in Yemen including updates of various regions within the country, the humanitarian situation, significant events such as the releasing of detainees and involvement of civil society organizations (CSOs) such as the International Committee of the Red Cross.¹⁴⁰

Additionally, the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), has scaled up projects throughout the country to include more initiatives that promote maternal health and lower child and infant mortality.¹⁴¹ UNICEF is working to improve access to nutritious food, clean safe drinking water, as well as ending the recruitment of child soldiers.¹⁴² The United Nations Human Rights Council (UNHRC) has been engaged in addressing ongoing human rights violations, and in 2017 adopted resolution 36/31 that established a group of international and regional experts on Yemen.¹⁴³ This panel monitors and reports human rights violations, reviews alleged violations, identifies perpetrators of violations and provides recommendations to access to justice, accountability, and reconciliation that would improve human rights within the country.¹⁴⁴

New issues have also developed between the rebels and international actors as the FSO Safer, which is a floating oil storage and offloading vessel that is 45 years old, has not faced any maintenance since 2015.¹⁴⁵ The FSO Safer holds over 1 million barrels of crude oil and experts warn that a spillage into the Red Sea ecology would need over 30 years to recover.¹⁴⁶ The UN has made numerous efforts to be able to board the vessel and conduct an assessment of its status but as of July, the Houthis have not granted their requests.¹⁴⁷ The tanker is owned by the Yemeni state-run Safer Exploration and Production Operations Company (SEPOC) but due to the war, SEPOC has been unable to afford any maintenance costs and damages to the ship are now irreversible.¹⁴⁸ The UN has also warned of the dire consequences of an oil spillage that could be catastrophic to Yemen as it could endanger the livelihoods of 28 million people.¹⁴⁹ The latest proposals submitted by the Special Envoy to Yemen is currently the best course of action to prevent an environmental and humanitarian disaster.¹⁵⁰ The proposal consists of three stages that aim to assess and conduct necessary repairs, provide basic maintenance to facilitate oil extraction, and finally dispose of the tanker.¹⁵¹ The actions proposed have been agreed to by the government and other stakeholders in the Yemen conflict but still need the approval of the Houthis to complete the project.¹⁵²

The Humanitarian Crisis and Impact of COVID-19

As the civil war and political upheaval in Yemen continues to drag on, no other group has been more adversely affected than that of civilians.¹⁵³ The UN estimates that approximately 80% of the population is in need of some form of assistance, and that the number of those in need continues to grow.¹⁵⁴ It's estimated that 100,000 people in Yemen have been killed since early 2016.¹⁵⁵ There have been more than 1,100 conflict related civilian casualties in the last year alone and 3.3 million people have been displaced as a result of this conflict.¹⁵⁶ Two thirds of the country's population, about 20 million people, is considered to be food insecure, and half are considered to be suffering from extreme hunger.¹⁵⁷ UNICEF estimates that 360,000 children are severely malnourished and the conditions children face are considered the most challenging in the world.¹⁵⁸ Infrastructure, which was limited before the conflict began, has been largely destroyed, thereby compounding the humanitarian crisis by making the delivery of basic human services even more challenging.¹⁵⁹ Due to this lack of infrastructure, as well as collapsing healthcare systems, the incidence of disease, especially cholera, has exploded.¹⁶⁰ The World Health Organization (WHO) has reported that there have been over 650,000 cholera cases over the past year and a half with over a quarter of those affected being children.¹⁶¹

The impact of the COVID-19 pandemic has also exposed an already vulnerable population to more critical levels of humanitarian and medical needs.¹⁶² Due to the conflict and rising cases it has been difficult to contain the outbreak and stop the aggressive spread, and the already weakened health system without many resources at their disposal has made life and medical aid even harder.¹⁶³ Approximately half of the health facilities are still functioning but most lack crucial resources to combat COVID-19 such as gloves, masks, and oxygen.¹⁶⁴ In addition to the COVID-19 pandemic, in Yemen over 40,000 people have been displaced this year, and this is predicted to increase due to rising conflicts in northern Yemen as well as the increased number of refugees such as in Marib which now has over 750,000 displaced people, outpacing its original population and seeing crucial resources run out.¹⁶⁵ Children have been severely affected throughout the crisis as many are affected by cholera outbreaks and starvation alongside school closures due to the pandemic that have left 7.8 million children without access to education.¹⁶⁶ In response to the increasing health concerns due to COVID-19, UNICEF has also added providing aid and assistance to those in need by providing medical supplies and testing kits.¹⁶⁷ The armed conflict in Yemen has also made delivering and providing medical attention a difficult challenge as many medical personnel and civilians avoid going to hospitals due to the likelihood of an attack on medical facilities.¹⁶⁸ It remains imperative, as many projections indicate, that a cessation in violence, and the normalization of governance can quickly reverse the most severe humanitarian consequences the region has been facing.¹⁶⁹ Furthermore, continuing to deliver basic human services is key to both resolving the humanitarian crisis and creating peace.¹⁷⁰

Upholding Peace Agreements

In late 2018, Yemen's main rival groups met in Sweden and agreed upon the Stockholm Agreement.¹⁷¹ The agreement is comprised of three main components that include: a ceasefire and demilitarization of both parties from the city of Hodeidah and its related ports, a similar ceasefire on the city of Ta'iz, and the creation of a prisoner swap program.¹⁷² The ceasefire in the city of Hodeidah and the use of its ports would allow for humanitarian assistance to reach Yemenis throughout the country.¹⁷³ The prisoner swap program seeks to address the 15,000 detained between the two groups, and its framework is planned to be decided upon in subsequent negotiations.¹⁷⁴ The parties further committed to reducing roadblocks to achieving peace, implementing the agreement, and continuing peaceful negotiations in a mutually acceptable location.¹⁷⁵

The Security Council further reinforced their support of the Stockholm Agreement with the adoption of resolution 2451 (2018) on “The Situation in the Middle East”, which endorsed the agreement and asked the Secretary-General to send a team of monitors to support its quick implementation.¹⁷⁶ In the year since the establishment of the UNMHA to uphold the Stockholm Agreement, there has been some progress, but there are still many challenges to overcome.¹⁷⁷ In its efforts in Hodeidah, UNMHA has contributed to a safer environment for civilians with an estimation that 150,000 people that had left the city have returned after the agreement was put in place with the ceasefire still largely holding.¹⁷⁸ The mission also monitors compliance between the parties, and works with Yemeni security forces to ensure that the security of the city and port of Hodeidah is adequate.¹⁷⁹ The UNMHA established five joint Observation Posts on the ground to monitor the situation and prevent further military escalation which resulted in a significant reduction in the overall level of violence.¹⁸⁰ In May 2019, the monitors verified the pullout and reported that cooperation between the various groups had been quite stable.¹⁸¹ The Hadi government allowed fuel ships to enter the port of Hodeidah, which has further established the humanitarian corridor laid out in the Stockholm Agreement.¹⁸² There has been a technical committee established to discuss prisoner exchanges including exchanging of lists, discussing logistical details and release of minors.¹⁸³ Unfortunately, Ta’iz represents a key area where further improvement is needed in the Stockholm Agreement to de-escalate hostilities and to open proper avenues for humanitarian assistance to those in need.¹⁸⁴ Only recently have there been new talks about creating another humanitarian corridor in Ta’iz, which was a key pillar of the Stockholm Agreement.¹⁸⁵

In addition to the Stockholm Agreement, there have been other negotiations in pursuit of peace for Yemen based on the measures of Security Council resolution 2216 (2015) such as the Riyadh Agreement signed in November of 2019.¹⁸⁶ The Riyadh Agreement sought to join the recognized government with the Southern Transition Council (STC), which operates as the government entity of the separatists in southern Yemen, to form a unity government with representation from both sides.¹⁸⁷ The newly formed coalition under the treaty provisions would recruit all STC combatants under the Ministry of Defense and vacate armed forces from Aden.¹⁸⁸ The new coalition seeks to establish a new organized negotiation front against the Houthi rebels and dedicates security forces to the protection and investment of civilian infrastructure in Aden in attempts to revive state institutions in the affected area.¹⁸⁹ Although the agreement was signed in November, there has been trouble in being able to come to an official agreement between the two parties on the implementation of the treaty as well as continued conflicts within the region.¹⁹⁰ After a few months of conflict, the government and the STC were able to establish a new ceasefire in June of 2020.¹⁹¹ In July of 2020, new negotiations overlooked by Saudi Arabia resulted in an agreement between the government and the STC that saw the STC abandon its April declaration of self-rule and recommit to the implementation of the Riyadh Agreement with the new coalition government to be formed within 30 days with equal numbers of ministries between Northern and Southern Yemen.¹⁹²

Conclusion

The situation in Yemen, entering its tenth year, has seen political advancements to improve the instability and armed conflicts throughout the country but still has much to address since the conflict escalated in 2015.¹⁹³ The humanitarian crisis that has resulted due to the political violence has made Yemen one of the most impoverished and unsafe places in the world for the country's citizens, especially for children.¹⁹⁴ The UN and its entities including the Security Council have been actively engaged and have been working on various facets of the situation ranging from the council's work on implementing sanctions and creating political missions to oversee a ceasefire.¹⁹⁵ There has been some headway in being able to establish a national ceasefire but efforts must still remain focused on ensuring the proper function of the Yemeni state and provide stability for the region.¹⁹⁶ A lasting solution will have to address the political differences and compromise between the three main factions engaged in Yemen.¹⁹⁷ While new negotiations have brought the parties to discuss solutions, the vision for Yemen will require assistance to address the critical humanitarian crisis and ensure lasting peace.¹⁹⁸

Further Research

When researching this topic, delegates should consider the following questions: What policies can the Security Council create to continue to ensure that the Stockholm Agreement is upheld? How can the advancements of the Riyadh Agreement assist in future negotiations? How effective has the UNMHA been to achieving its mandate? What can be done to continue to reduce the humanitarian crisis that the civil war in Yemen has created? What human rights violations are occurring due to the conflict, and how can they be addressed? How can the UN maintain warring parties at the negotiating table to resolve the political crisis in Yemen? How can the GCC Initiative be improved and or implemented? How should regional and international groups remain engaged in the crisis? How effective have the sanctions been in curbing the violence? How can an already weakened state address the impacts of the COVID-19 pandemic?

This resource will provide delegates with an overview of the conflict and its origins as well as the initial pushes for the Stockholm Agreement and its purpose as an instrument to address the crisis and conflict in Yemen. The document also discusses the different strategies and phases of the agreement through its implementation methods and what the outcome objectives are for each phase of the transitional government. This will also cover the legal implications of the agreement and the protocols and precedent set by international agreements to resolve the conflict and establish a new government in Yemen.

The Gulf Initiative was the major political transition plan that the GCC created with the hope of resolving the political upheaval in Yemen at the start of the conflict. This document has continuously been cited by the UN, as well as the Security Council, Member States and different civil society groups. While the Initiative is on hold due to the focus being on de-escalation of violence, the plan still is the roadmap that the international community has endorsed in establishing a peaceful political solution. Delegates should familiarize themselves with the goals set forth in the Initiative, and should also review how the plan's shortcomings have led to the current situation in Yemen.

This document provides an explanation to the rising risks and spread of the COVID-19 virus in Yemen and the response by both civilians and medical personnel. Due to the conflicts in the country many citizens have been avoiding seeking medical treatment. This will be useful to delegates to understand the social impacts the current conflict can cause. Delegates will see that the lack of resources and need of aid are additional conditions that need to be addressed due to the complexities that are created by the conflict. This information will present new facets of how the violence can extend to social protection systems and place pressure on the citizens for assistance.

This website serves as a good synopsis for the major aspects of work that the Security Council has done thus far as it pertains to the situation in Yemen. The website lists almost all the resolutions that have been adopted by the Security Council about Yemen in the last 8 years and there is a brief summary of what each of the resolutions are regarding. All of the resolutions listed have links to the full text resolution, which makes research and review much easier. Delegates should utilize this source to familiarize themselves with what the Council has already done regarding the topic.

Resolution 2140 was a significant resolution in regards to the situation in Yemen, as it formed the bulwark of Security Council policy as it retains to sanctions. The resolution defined the freezing of assets as well as the travel ban and called for the Secretary-General to create a group of experts that would aid in these objectives. The mandate has been subsequently extended in several resolutions following the initial passage of this resolution. Delegates should review this resolution and seek to understand how the Security Council utilizes the powers given to it under the Charter of the United Nations when it comes to sanctions and security.

II. Impact of COVID-19 on Peace and Security

*"It is time to put armed conflict on lockdown and focus together on the true fight of our lives."*¹⁹⁹

Introduction

Global pandemics pose a threat to peace and security, exacerbating already existing conflict situations and challenges.²⁰⁰ Pandemics are defined as "the worldwide spread of a new disease" for which "most people do not have immunity."²⁰¹ As a pandemic, COVID-19 is currently hindering United Nations (UN) peacekeeping operations, which promote the achievement of durable peace through collaborative activities carried out on the field together with international and local stakeholders.²⁰² The pandemic is also affecting peace in security in other ways. Due to the pandemic, elections have also been postponed in some countries.²⁰³ Transparency and accountability during elections have been neglected as many governments focused on fighting the health emergency.²⁰⁴ Threats to peace by armed militias and agitators rise as local authorities focus their efforts on combatting the pandemic.²⁰⁵ Peace processes and humanitarian aid dispatch also underwent delays due to the many restrictions put in place to focus on the fight against COVID-19.²⁰⁶

In January 2020, the World Health Organization (WHO) began investigating anomalous episodes of pneumonia in the Wuhan area in China.²⁰⁷ It announced that the disease was a new type of Coronavirus, defined by WHO as part of a family of viruses responsible for respiratory infections in humans.²⁰⁸ On 30 January, after a meeting of the International Health Regulations (2005) Emergency Committee, WHO Director-General Dr. Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus, declared that the newly discovered coronavirus, constituted a Public Health Emergency of International Concern after thousands of people became ill in China.²⁰⁹ This new virus was named COVID-19.²¹⁰ COVID-19 spread to 18 other countries around the world.²¹¹ On 11 March, COVID-19 was classified as a pandemic.

Pandemics have an impact not only on people's health and health care systems, but also on political and socio-economic stability, as well as on human rights.²¹² These impacts affect the lives of everyone, but in particular, the lives of some of the most vulnerable people, including that of the youth and women within conflict zones.²¹³ The COVID-19 pandemic has hindered the ability of peacekeepers to continue their work in fragile areas due to movement restrictions; and a general increase in instability has made the already unpredictable situation of many countries in Africa, Asia, and South America even harder to tackle.²¹⁴ The UN is paying particular attention to the effects of COVID-19 on vulnerable and displaced people, as well as to a possible recrudescence of terrorist attacks.²¹⁵

According to Article 24 of the Charter of the United Nations (1945), the Security Council is responsible for the “maintenance of international peace and security.”²¹⁶ It identifies challenges to peace and acts of aggression, and undertakes measures to restore peace and security, such as the suspension of economic and/or diplomatic relations.²¹⁷ When these initiatives are not sufficient to restore international peace and security, the Security Council “may take such action by air, sea, or land forces as may be necessary.”²¹⁸ The Security Council takes these actions through the deployment of peacekeeping missions.²¹⁹

The Universal Declaration of Human Rights (1948) further establishes the right of each human being to “a standard of living adequate for the health and well-being of himself and of his family.”²²⁰ Similarly, the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Times of War (1949) asks for the protection of health care services and facilities, with a focus on the prevention and treatment of epidemics.²²¹

In line with these principles, on 1 July 2020 the UN Security Council adopted resolution 2532 (2020) on “The maintenance of international peace and security,” calling for a stop to all hostilities for a minimum of three months, with an exception for operations against terrorist groups linked to the Islamic State in Iraq and the Levant (ISIL) and Al Qaeda.²²² This is because terrorism continues to be a threat to international peace and security during the pandemic and could in some cases gain momentum because of the increased fragility shown by states, with police and military forces focused on addressing the COVID-19 emergency.²²³ Terrorist groups could exploit this fact to increase their activity and carry out violent attacks.²²⁴ Resolution 2532 (2020) was the result of long negotiations started at the beginning of April, and is the first resolution adopted by the Security Council to directly address the effects of COVID-19 on peace and security.²²⁵ The resolution mentioned WHO only indirectly through a reference to General Assembly resolution 74/270 on “Global Solidarity to Fight the Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19),” adopted on 3 April 2020, which recognizes the fundamental role of WHO in the fight against COVID-19.²²⁶ Security Council resolution 2532 (2020) also calls for a continued dialogue between the Security Council and the Secretary General to monitor the consequences of the pandemic on conflict-ridden areas and for the involvement of vulnerable groups such as women, youth, and displaced people.²²⁷

On 14 July 2020, Security Council resolution 2535 (2020), on “The maintenance of international peace and security,” called for an increased engagement of civil society, and young people in particular, in conflict resolution and peacebuilding efforts.²²⁸ Similarly, on 21 April 2020, the General Assembly adopted resolution 74/274 on “International Cooperation to Ensure Global Access to Medicines, Vaccines and Medical Equipment to Face COVID-19,” highlighting the importance of cooperation among nations and other relevant stakeholders, of multilateralism, and the fundamental coordinating role of WHO.²²⁹

Role of the International System

After the declaration of the pandemic, on 23 March 2020, UN Secretary-General Antonio Guterres, called for a global cease-fire to help dispatch aid in a safe way, especially in those states already weakened by ongoing conflicts.²³⁰ For more than three months, members of the UN Security Council did not agree on a resolution due to the differing positions of some permanent members on whether or not to refer to WHO in the resolution.²³¹ During this time, the Security Council had been operating through procedures different from usual: negotiations are taking place through videoconferences and voting procedures are done in writing.²³² After the final draft of a resolution is made available, Member States have 24 hours to submit their vote, and the results are announced 12 hours after the end of the voting procedure.²³³

While negotiations for a resolution on COVID-19 were ongoing, the Security Council issued various press statements to highlight its concerns of additional threats to peace and security posed by the pandemic in already fragile regions.²³⁴ The Security Council also promoted the continued use of safe corridors to be established and observed for humanitarian operations in countries affected by conflict, issuing three separate press statements: one on the situation in Yemen on 10 April 2020, one on Afghanistan on 30 June 2020, and the last one on South Sudan on 13 July 2020.²³⁵ The Security Council also adopted resolutions highlighting the effects of COVID-19 on conflict-ridden areas and on UN peacekeeping missions there, including: Security Council resolution 2534 (2020) on “The Situation in the Middle East”; Security Council resolution 2525 (2020) on “Reports of the Secretary-General on the Sudan and South Sudan”; and resolution 2520 (2020) on “The Situation in Somalia.”²³⁶ These resolutions request that Member States facilitate the work of UN peacekeeping missions and that they guarantee the movement and safety of their personnel, in spite of COVID-19 restrictions.²³⁷

In June, the Secretary-General issued the UN Comprehensive Response to COVID-19, identifying three fundamental aspects to be addressed by the UN system: healthcare, socioeconomic stability, and structural inequalities.²³⁸ The Secretary-General further recommended the following actions to be taken to address these aspects: ensuring full and affordable access to medicines, vaccines, and treatment; providing humanitarian aid, especially in areas already affected by conflicts or other challenges; and ensuring social protection accessibility.²³⁹

WHO is responsible for coordinating efforts to combat COVID-19 within the UN system.²⁴⁰ On 19 May 2020, WHO’s resolution on COVID-19 Response (WHA73.1) invited Member States to undertake appropriate measures to fight COVID-19.²⁴¹ Among these measures, many non-governmental organizations (NGOs) agree on the importance of facilitating access to medicines for the population and ensuring safe corridors for humanitarian aid, considering that about two billion people live in fragile states and in conflict-ridden areas.²⁴²

The Inter-Agency Standing Committee (IASC), whose members include many UN bodies and agencies, is in charge of coordinating responses to humanitarian emergencies, working together with local stakeholders.²⁴³ The IASC issued the Global Humanitarian Response Plan, valid from April to December 2020.²⁴⁴ The Plan aims at harmonizing efforts by UN bodies and NGOs to fight the pandemic, while promoting social stability and protecting vulnerable people, especially migrants and refugees.²⁴⁵

Establishing an International Cease Fire

Calls for an International Ceasefire

When the Secretary-General called for a global ceasefire on 23 March 2020, the 26 Special Political Missions and 13 peacekeeping operations active around the world increased their efforts to put into practice the Secretary-General's call, which is fundamental to preventing an aggravation of conflicts and disruptions to humanitarian aid delivery in violence-ridden areas.²⁴⁶ Recent and ongoing conflicts have resulted in a destruction of hospitals and other relevant facilities as part of a strategy to weaken the enemy, preventing the health infrastructure from functioning effectively to meet the needs of all of those needing care.²⁴⁷ Peacekeepers found many difficulties in implementing a ceasefire, which, in some cases, has been brief or did not take place at all.²⁴⁸ It is proving challenging to achieve concrete agreements in some conflict zones to stop hostilities because local tensions and the causes of conflict tend to prevail over international calls for a stop to the violence.²⁴⁹ In some countries only one of the two conflicting parties, either governmental forces or rebel groups, have accepted to stop hostilities.²⁵⁰ Violence has continued, for example, in Somalia, Libya, and Cameroon after an initial acceptance of the ceasefire by one of the secessionist forces was not adopted by the other militias, allowing conflict to cripple the country.²⁵¹

Peacekeeping Operations and COVID-19

Peacekeeping operations aim at protecting the population of countries affected by conflict, supporting national authorities to strengthen their capacity to prevent further violence, and promoting durable peace.²⁵² The critical work of peacekeepers in establishing and maintaining peace and security has been hindered by the pandemic in a variety of ways, and COVID-19 cases have been reported among troops where active peacekeeping operations exist, resulting in the isolation of some of the troops in the field.²⁵³ New schedules of troop rotations and repatriations have been prepared to make sure activities can continue without endangering the well-being of UN workers.²⁵⁴ However, many of these schedules suffer delays and set-backs, leading to the extension of multiple peacekeeping missions.²⁵⁵ For example, the peacekeeping mission in Darfur, Sudan, known as UNAMID, managed jointly by the African Union (AU) and the UN, was originally set to end on 31 October 2020.²⁵⁶ It will now remain in place until the end of the year, to counter the slowdown of its activities because of movement limitations to fight COVID-19, though a peace agreement had been achieved on 31 August 2020.²⁵⁷

Travel restrictions, as a preventative method against COVID-19, are impacting negotiations and peacebuilding efforts because most of these peace negotiation and peacebuilding activities normally take place at the local level.²⁵⁸ They rely heavily on public gatherings, in-person meetings, and personal exchanges to involve local leaders and communities in peacebuilding processes.²⁵⁹ Limitations placed on public gatherings and in-person exchanges alter the way in which UN personnel carry out their activities, making it more challenging to interact with local stakeholders.²⁶⁰ Limited interactions can leave critical groups out of peacebuilding efforts and can result in a changed perception of the peacekeepers' role on the field.²⁶¹ For example, in Afghanistan, women have been long excluded from the political discourse, however the international community recognizes the importance of their inclusion in negotiations to set inclusive priorities for peacebuilding.²⁶² Reduced opportunities for interaction can also lead to a worsening of the already delicate relations between the UN and local actors, who sometimes see peacekeeping operations as enemy combatants.²⁶³ In some African countries, national actors have exploited fear for COVID-19 to spread disinformation among the population by accusing UN personnel of being carriers of the virus.²⁶⁴ This puts peacekeepers at high risk of being targeted and erodes their authority and trust by the population to effectively operate in these complex situations.²⁶⁵ In many countries experiencing conflict such as Yemen, attacks against troops and humanitarian aid workers were already common before the pandemic and represent an even greater potential threat in the current situation, with interferences to humanitarian aid dispatch having escalated between 2019 and 2020.²⁶⁶

In 14 countries affected by conflict, the Security Council has established sanction regimes to promote peace and security through the use of economic measures, embargoes, and other restrictions.²⁶⁷ After the COVID-19 outbreak, the International Red Cross asked to suspend unilateral sanctions, out of concern that humanitarian aid could not be delivered to the people in need.²⁶⁸ In fact, the measures adopted in sanctioned regimes, especially travel limitations and embargoes, can potentially disrupt humanitarian aid.²⁶⁹ Sectoral humanitarian exemptions are normally used to allow humanitarian organizations to still carry out their work in sanctioned regimes, but, in a pandemic, humanitarian exemptions may not be enough to ensure the protection of civilians.²⁷⁰ Seeing that the request to lift sanctions has not been implemented yet, the Special Rapporteur on the Negative Impact of Unilateral Coercive Measures on the Enjoyment of Human Rights highlighted the importance of guaranteeing exemptions quickly and “automatically upon request.”²⁷¹

Multilateralism, Cooperation, and the Role of Young People and Women

While the pandemic poses many threats, it also presents a chance to promote multilateralism, which consists of coordinating and harmonizing efforts between different stakeholders to achieve a common goal.²⁷² It increases cooperation and inclusiveness in peacebuilding efforts, including creating opportunity to increase the involvement of young people and women in decision-making processes.²⁷³ The UN Secretary General recently cited the partnership between the UN and the African Union as an example of successful cooperation between the UN system and other actors to promote peace and security.²⁷⁴ The aim is to engage vulnerable groups so as not to replicate past failures, where agreements to end conflicts and support countries to achieve long-term peace were often based on inequalities and on a lack of involvement of local communities.²⁷⁵ During a pandemic, it is important that the measures undertaken to address the emergency are “conflict-sensitive” so as not to cause a deterioration of relationships with local leaders.²⁷⁶ A shared responsibility to continue efforts to ensure peace and security will be especially important in the long run, when the negative economic effects of COVID-19 may result in a tendency to reduce Member States’ contributions to peacekeeping operations.²⁷⁷

Security Council resolution 2532 (2020) states that women and young people, especially in fragile areas, are highly affected by COVID-19.²⁷⁸ Women are more often involved in occupations related to healthcare, working for example as nurses and cleaners, and are at higher risk of exposure to the virus.²⁷⁹ Additionally, there has been an increase in domestic violence against women and girls since the beginning of the pandemic, due to shelter in place orders limiting the freedom of movement, exacerbating limited contact with people outside the household, and fostering highly stressful and challenging living conditions.²⁸⁰ It is important that civil society is involved in combating the pandemic and in the promotion of peace and security, as it is happening in Cyprus where the UN and women organizations are collaborating to combat domestic violence.²⁸¹

Vulnerable groups should be involved in COVID-19 responses and in decision making processes.²⁸² Some studies have shown that there are higher chances of success when a peace agreement is achieved with the involvement of civil society, women, and the youth in particular.²⁸³ This process can be facilitated if women included in negotiations are able to access training opportunities and expert advice, and if women’s civil society organizations are fully allowed to be part of the political discourse.²⁸⁴ Promoting more widespread use of technologies, especially now that many meetings had to be moved online due to COVID-19, could help increase vulnerable groups’ integration in the life of the different countries, reducing tensions, and contributing to cancelling the divide between urban and rural areas as well.²⁸⁵

Conclusion

The COVID-19 pandemic has had many effects on the world, and on conflict-ridden countries in particular, exacerbating already existing instability.²⁸⁶ The political and socio-economic instability that existed in conflict zones before COVID-19, has made the fight against the virus even more difficult.²⁸⁷ It is of fundamental importance to understand how the international community can ensure peace and security even during an international emergency, such as a pandemic.²⁸⁸ The UN has identified different paths to follow, but many challenges need to be overcome, such as the ineffectiveness of the global ceasefire and other threats posed to peacekeeping operations in case of conflict.²⁸⁹ The international community recognizes multilateralism and the involvement of vulnerable groups in decision making as the key to find more durable solutions.²⁹⁰

Further Research

As delegates proceed with their research, they should ask themselves the following questions: in the face of COVID-19, how can a more effective ceasefire be implemented? What are the actors that need to be involved in order to promote cooperation in this field? How can the different challenges encountered by peacekeeping operations, made worse by COVID-19, be overcome? How can the international community foster youth and women involvement in humanitarian response and in peacebuilding?

This resolution, adopted by UN Security Council on 1 July 2020, is of the utmost importance because it was the result of a long process of negotiations, which lasted months after the UN Secretary-General issued his global call for a ceasefire. The Security Council encountered difficulties in finding an agreement on such a text, as there were differing positions among permanent Members. In the end, the Security Council agreed on calling for a ninety-day stop to hostilities, which stated that the ceasefire did not include operations against terrorist groups.

The plan was issued by the Inter-Agency Standing Committee (IASC), which comprises many relevant UN bodies, in April and is valid until December 2020. It identifies core needs with regards to public health and the impact of the pandemic on society. The document outlines different measures to be undertaken to fight COVID-19 and deliver aid to people living in fragile areas. It highlights the preferred coordination mechanism to implement them. Delegates will find the annexes to the plan particularly useful as they address specific concerns, such as the situation of refugees and people affected by conflicts.

It also lists some operational guidelines issued by the Office of Rule of Law and Security Institutions, UN Police, and other institutions. These are relevant to understand what measures are being implemented on the field, not only to protect citizens, but also to protect UN personnel and ensure their safety and the possibility to safeguard UN presence in fragile countries. Delegates will find this document particularly useful to achieve a better understanding of the challenges posed to the work of peacekeeping operations by the pandemic.

This Policy Brief was published in April 2020 to assess the impact of the pandemic on women. It highlights some of the main challenges faced by women in times of COVID-19, ranging from economic consequences and risks of exposure to the disease to an alarming increase in domestic violence against women and girls. The document identifies some relevant strategies to mitigate these issues, carried out by the UN together with local stakeholders. The Policy Brief will be beneficial for delegates wishing to gain a deeper knowledge of the challenges faced by vulnerable groups and of how the international community is planning on including them in decision-making in the future.

III. Protection of Civilians in Armed Conflict

“Civilians continue to account for the vast majority of casualties and are targeted and victims of indiscriminate attacks and other violations and harm by parties to conflict. Twenty years on, the protection agenda is as relevant and pressing as ever.”²⁹¹

Introduction

The United Nations (UN) Security Council often discusses thematic items that might not be specific to a conflict or a crisis situation.²⁹² Of these thematic issues, the Protection of Civilians (POC) was first brought into the limelight twenty years ago in 1999 when the Security Council adopted resolution 1265 on the “Protection of Civilians in Armed Conflict.”²⁹³ This resolution, together with the “Report of the Secretary-General on the Protection of Civilians in Armed Conflict” (S/2019/373), set the groundwork for all subsequent resolutions that aimed at establishing parameters to protect civilians during armed conflict.²⁹⁴ Such protection entails treating civilians humanely at all times and protecting them against violence, threats, and insults regardless of sex, race, religion, or political opinion.²⁹⁵ It also includes maintaining respect for the people, their honor, their family rights, their religious convictions and practice, and their manners and customs.²⁹⁶ Rule 5 of customary International Humanitarian Law (IHL) defines civilians as persons who are not members of the armed forces.²⁹⁷ It follows that civilians also include journalists, medical staff, and UN and humanitarian personnel.²⁹⁸ IHL also defines three types of armed conflict, during which civilians are entitled to protection: international armed conflict (IAC), internationalized armed conflict, and non-international armed conflict (NIAC).²⁹⁹

In 2019, the Action on Armed Violence recorded 29,485 deaths caused by explosives alone, 66% of which were civilians.³⁰⁰ The following year the UN reported over 20,000 civilians dead or injured across 10 conflict zones.³⁰¹ These alarming numbers continue to show that it is crucial to provide protection for civilians during armed conflict.³⁰² To mitigate the growing numbers of civilian deaths each year, the Security Council adopted numerous POC resolutions focusing primarily on changing national policies or dispatching peacekeeping missions.³⁰³ Recently there has been a growing focus on providing protections to specific targeted groups of civilians, such as women, children, journalists, health workers, and humanitarian personnel.³⁰⁴

Although the Charter of the United Nations (1945) does not explicitly mention the protection of civilians in armed conflicts, Security Council resolution 1674 (2006) on “Protection of Civilians” notes that deliberate targeting of civilians and the violation of international humanitarian and human rights law in armed conflict constitutes a threat to international peace and security.³⁰⁵ This, in turn, implies that the deliberate targeting of civilians directly defies Article 1 of the UN Charter, which states that the purpose of the UN is to “maintain peace and security.”³⁰⁶ In more explicit terms, the Fourth Geneva Convention Relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War (1949) establishes that civilians, or “protected persons,” are entitled to protection in all cases of conflict.³⁰⁷ The convention’s definition of protected persons encompasses everyone who is not participating in hostilities, including military personnel who have laid down their arms or have become incapacitated.³⁰⁸ The convention furthermore states that these protected persons must be treated humanely and not subject to any form of discrimination.³⁰⁹ Since the Geneva Convention has been passed into customary IHL in 1993 by the Security Council, all states, regardless of whether they are signatories to the Geneva Conventions, are bound by this provision during armed conflict.³¹⁰

Although IHL does not define what armed conflict is, parties to the Geneva Convention have entrusted the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) to spread knowledge and understanding of international humanitarian law applicable to armed conflicts.³¹¹ In this capacity, the ICRC developed a three-fold classification of armed conflicts.³¹² International armed conflicts (IAC) are defined as conflicts between legal armed forces of at least two different states, internationalized armed conflicts that occur when two factions are in conflict internally (in one state) but are supported by different states, and non-international armed conflicts (NIAC), in which at least one of the parties to the conflict is a non-governmental entity.³¹³ In the context of IACs, Article 2 of the Fourth Geneva Convention declares itself applicable to “all cases of declared war or of any armed conflict that may arise between two or more high contracting parties, even if the state of war is not recognized.”³¹⁴ This is used to highlight that the determination of the existence of armed conflict is not dependent on states recognizing the situation as a state of war.³¹⁵

Although the exact definition of POC remains vague, it has been established by Common Article 3 of the Geneva Conventions that the treatment and protection of civilians entails abstaining from violence to life and person, in particular murder of all kinds; mutilation; cruel treatment and torture; taking of hostages; outrages upon personal dignity, in particular humiliating and degrading treatment; the passing of sentences; and the carrying out of summary executions.³¹⁶ Within the protection framework, special attention is granted to vulnerable groups of civilian populations.³¹⁷ The Declaration on the Protection of Women and Children in Emergency and Armed Conflict (1974) explicitly states that women and children are the most vulnerable groups in armed conflict.³¹⁸ This declaration strongly condemns violence targeted against women or children in armed conflict and calls on states to abide by international law.³¹⁹

Security Council Resolution 1674 of 2006 reaffirmed the 2005 World Summit Outcome Document on the states' responsibility to protect their populations from genocide, ethnic cleansing, and other war crimes and crimes against humanity.³²⁰ As opposed to POC, the Responsibility to Protect (R2P) principle, which was officially endorsed by the General Assembly in the 2005 outcome document, is not limited to situations of armed conflict but stresses that the responsibility to protect civilians from aforementioned crimes falls to Member States.³²¹ The 2005 endorsement and the introduction of R2P was a reaction to a series of serious human rights violations that were committed against the civilians in Rwanda and Srebrenica in the 1990s.³²² In case of Rwanda, the Organization of African Unity (OAU) took no action at that time, despite having an existing African Charter on Human and People's Rights (1981) at their disposal.³²³ Since then, the African Union (AU), which succeeded the OAU, has adopted the Charter into the African Court of Justice and developed Draft Guidelines for the Protection of Civilians in African Union Peace Support Operations (2012), which provide a multi-tiered approach to protect civilians.³²⁴ The guidelines recommend integrating POC into the political process to establish a protective, rights-based environment and taking four steps to physically protect civilians: prevent, pre-empt, respond, and consolidate activities relating to conflict.³²⁵

Role of the International System

The Security Council has passed a vast library of resolutions on POC, including, but not limited to, resolutions 1265 (1999) 2474 (2019), 2417 (2018), 2286 (2016), 2175 (2014), 1674 (2006), and 1296 (2000).³²⁶ All resolutions adopted stress the importance of abiding by IHL and the Geneva Conventions and condemn targeting civilians and the humanitarian personnel that attempt to alleviate suffering of civilian populations and save people's lives in armed conflict.³²⁷ Through these protection-focused resolutions, the Security Council has made progress by strengthening peacekeeping missions' mandate to protect civilians, imposing sanctions when protection failed, collecting evidence on transgressions in protection, and promoting states' accountability.³²⁸ One example of a peacekeeping mission containing an explicit mandate to protect civilians is the United Nations African Union Hybrid Operation in Darfur (UNAMID), which is comprised of a joint UN-AU peacekeeping mission deployed to Darfur, Sudan in response to the civil war which began in 2003.³²⁹ The Secretary-General also reiterated the Security Council's mission to protect civilians in the annual open debate on POC in armed conflict in May 2019

and called for three approaches that he additionally highlighted in his report on POC.³³⁰ In concrete terms, he recommended adopting national policy frameworks on POC, enhancing compliance by non-state actors, and promoting compliance through advocacy and accountability of Member States.³³¹ The report also highlighted the importance of the Working Group on Children and Armed Conflict (CAAC), established in 2005 through Security Council resolution 1612 (2005) on “Children and Armed Conflict.”³³² The CAAC provides recommendations to the Security Council on possible measures to protect children in armed conflict.³³³ To highlight the role of women in maintaining peace and to promote greater participation by women in political decision-making, the Security Council passed resolution 1325 on women, peace, and security (2000).³³⁴ This resolution calls for gender perspectives to be incorporated into the mandates of UN peacekeeping efforts, and further calls upon Member States to take special measures to protect women and girls against gender-based violence in conflict situations.³³⁵ The role of youth in peace processes is also a priority for the Security Council, which has passed multiple resolutions on youth, peace, and security, most recently resolution 2535 (2020).³³⁶ Resolution 2535 calls attention to the role of youth in conflict prevention and asks states to implement processes to ensure greater inclusion for youth in decision-making processes.³³⁷

Other resolutions that the Security Council adopted on the protection of vulnerable groups among civilian populations are resolutions 2222 (2015) and 1738 (2006) on “Protection of Civilians in Armed Conflict,” which target journalists and associated media personnel in armed conflict, and 1502 (2003) on “Protection of United Nations Personnel, Associated Personnel and Humanitarian Personnel in Conflict Zones.”³³⁸ All three reiterate the importance of abiding by IHL and the principle of proportionality.³³⁹ Although the Security Council is the leading organ on POC, other international organizations, non-governmental organizations (NGOs), and humanitarian relief agencies are also involved on both policy and operational levels.³⁴⁰ The UN Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA) observes POC week, which most recently took place from 27 May to 1 June 2020.³⁴¹ Each year features events raising awareness of different facets of POC, such as protecting those with disabilities and the environment.³⁴² In 2019 OCHA published an occasional policy paper titled Building a Culture of Protection: 20 Years of Security Council Engagement on the Protection of Civilians (2019) for the twentieth anniversary of Security Council’s engagement on POC.³⁴³ This policy paper, which was published in tandem with the Secretary-General’s report on POC in 2019, maps out the history of Security Council’s involvement with this thematic issue and gives recommendations on the way forward.³⁴⁴ Among these recommendations are respecting IHL's principles, facilitating humanitarian access, protecting women and children, and prioritizing the setting of clear mandates for peacekeeping missions.³⁴⁵ In order to share best practices with regards to peacekeeping missions, the International Conference on the Protection of Civilians published a set of eighteen non-binding pledges under the name of the Kigali Principles on the Protection of Civilians in 2015.³⁴⁶ The key provisions relevant to POC lie in principles 3, 8, and 13, whereby peacekeepers pledge to be prepared to use force to protect civilians and to take disciplinary action against their own personnel, should they fail to carry out their mandate to protect civilians.³⁴⁷

Since most policy papers and reports identify a gap in the POC approaches with regard to the lack of respect armed groups have for IHL, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) published a paper in 2015 under the title International Legal Protection of Human Rights in Armed Conflict.³⁴⁸ This research paper lists all the relevant IHL principles that pertain to the protection of human rights in armed conflict and explicitly mentions that IHL is primarily, but not exclusively, addressed to state actors in armed conflict.³⁴⁹ Other entities that this paper also highlights are intergovernmental organizations such as the European Union (EU) and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO).³⁵⁰ Unlike other organizations with military power, NATO recently adopted a comprehensive Policy for the Protection of Civilians (2018), which explicitly defines POC as all efforts taken to avoid, minimize, and mitigate the negative effects on civilians arising from any NATO military operations.³⁵¹ The Center for Civilians in Conflict (CIVIC), an NGO that works with both state and non-state armed groups to prevent, mitigate, and respond to civilian harm, publishes annual reports on POC.³⁵² Their report from 2019, marking the 20 years the Security Council has spent tackling this issue, echoed OCHA's policy paper's recommendations, one of which is to protect civilians through peacekeeping missions.³⁵³ The main responsibility for protecting civilians nevertheless rests with states and their national and local institutions.³⁵⁴ Both police and military personnel are mandated to undertake preventive measures and respond to threats of physical and other forms of violence to protect civilians during armed conflicts.³⁵⁵

Protection of Vulnerable Groups in Armed Conflict

In recent years, the Security Council has shifted its focus to specific vulnerable groups of civilians in armed conflict, including women, children, journalists, medical staff, and humanitarian personnel.³⁵⁶ Of these groups, data is relatively abundant on how children are affected by armed conflict.³⁵⁷ In 2019 alone, 30% of civilian casualties in Afghanistan were children, with similar numbers echoing in other conflict-ridden areas.³⁵⁸ Death is not the only way children become victims of armed conflict; they are often displaced, separated from their families, and experience hindrances with regard to their education.³⁵⁹

To alleviate the suffering of children affected by armed conflicts, the Security Council Working Group on CAAC sends letters with recommendations to parties to conflict, Member States, the UN system, donors, and other relevant actors and issues a public statement in the form of Security Council press release.³⁶⁰ Conflict Dynamic International, an NGO that works to prevent and resolve violent conflict between and within states and to alleviate human suffering resulting from conflicts, also recently published a Children in Armed Conflict Accountability Framework (2015) that aims at holding conflict parties responsible for the protection of children and giving the right care to children in conflict.³⁶¹ This framework also attempts to encourage efforts aimed at preventing serious violations of international law committed against children in armed conflict.³⁶²

Unlike the relative abundance of data on children mortalities due to armed conflict, data on how youth is affected is vastly lacking.³⁶³ Gender-disaggregated data is also relatively scarce, although a study by the International Peace Research Institute from 2009 found that, in general, male deaths are higher during wartime, while female mortality is higher post-conflict.³⁶⁴ The numbers show that male aid workers also experience attacks 3-6 times more times than female aid workers.³⁶⁵ Female aid workers, however, are more likely to experience sexual assaults and other types of physical violence.³⁶⁶ Attacks on aid workers in general have been consistently high every year; in 2019, 483 aid workers became victims of attacks, 125 of which were killed.³⁶⁷ In an effort to raise awareness for these incidents, a #NotATarget campaign was launched on World Humanitarian Day in 2017, which saw 2 million people on social media hold their leaders and governments accountable for the protection of civilians.³⁶⁸

Protection of healthcare workers in armed conflict

Attacks on healthcare workers based in conflict zones is widespread; in 2019 there were 1,006 security incidents affecting health care workers, resulting in 825 casualties across 11 states and territories.³⁶⁹ The effects of this are particularly devastating given that civilians in areas of conflict are in particular need of medical care, not only from injuries sustained as a direct result of conflict, but also from an increased vulnerability to outbreaks of infectious diseases.³⁷⁰ Given the increased vulnerability of civilians and detainees in conflict areas to infectious COVID-19, these trends are likely to be further exacerbated in 2020.³⁷¹

Despite the frequency with which these attacks occur, there is a lack of reporting and data collection which makes it difficult for perpetrators to be held responsible for their actions.³⁷² Resolution 2286 (2016), adopted unanimously by the Security Council in 2016, demanded all conflict participants to allow for health workers to be allowed to operate unimpeded in a manner consistent with international humanitarian law.³⁷³ It furthermore called for Member States to collect more data on activities which hinder the administration of medical care across conflict zones.³⁷⁴ One resource used to monitor and publicize the scale of attacks on medical personnel is the World Health Organization's (WHO)

Peacekeeping Missions on the Protection of Civilians

The UN Peacekeepers provide security and political support to help countries transition from conflict to peace.³⁷⁷ The Security Council deploys peacekeeping operations for various reasons, such as to facilitate the political processes; maintain peace and security; assist in disarmament, demobilization, and reintegration of former combatants; support the organization of elections; protect and promote human rights; and help restore the rule of law.³⁷⁸ Nevertheless, the vast majority of peacekeeping missions are POC operations, with 95% of all current peacekeeping operations mandated to protect civilians.³⁷⁹

The Kigali Principles, which were adopted by several of the biggest troop- and financial- contributing countries to guide all peacekeeping efforts and ensure better protection of civilians on the ground, highlight the importance of pre-deployment trainings and overall preparedness of the peacekeeping staff.³⁸⁰ More importantly, the signatories pledged to investigate and, where necessary, prosecute its personnel in instances when they fail to protect civilians in accordance with their mandate.³⁸¹ After past allegations of misconduct committed by UN personnel against civilians were brought to light, including human rights violations and sexual violence, the Security Council called for enhanced national and international accountability mechanisms and strived to improve proper investigation and prosecution of committed crimes.³⁸²

The Kigali Principles also attempt to make peacekeeping missions more effective.³⁸³ A study and analysis of the effectiveness of peacekeeping missions was undertaken by OCHA and the Department of Peacekeeping Operations (DPKO), now called the Department of Peace Operations (DPO), in 2010.³⁸⁴ This study was published in the form of an independent report entitled Protecting Civilians in the Context of UN Peacekeeping Operations: Successes, Setbacks and Remaining Challenges.³⁸⁵ The recommendations contained within this study were divided into four themes to improve effectiveness of peacekeeping operations: linking the Security Council to the field, mission-wide strategy and crisis planning, improving the role of uniformed personnel, and political follow-up on achieving the mission's goals.³⁸⁶

Despite these efforts to make peacekeeping missions more transparent and effective, such missions still remain controversial, with the United States deciding to cut its funding towards peacekeeping by 40% in 2016.³⁸⁷ Set up by Kofi Annan, former UN Secretary-General, an independent inquiry into the role of the UN in Rwanda in 1993-1994 initiated in 1999.³⁸⁸ Its subsequent report held the UN responsible for withdrawing its peacekeeping mission from Rwanda before providing humanitarian assistance to almost one million Tutsis that subsequently became victims of genocide.³⁸⁹ This experience stands in deep contrast to Côte d'Ivoire's success story with the peacekeeping mission deployed in 2004.³⁹⁰ UN data highlights the peaceful elections of 2015-2016 as a direct benefit from the UN Operation in Côte d'Ivoire (UNOCI) and a benchmark for the improved level of security of civilians in Côte d'Ivoire.³⁹¹ POC remains a core responsibility of the UN peacekeeping and requires a concerted and coordinated action by the Security Council; the Secretariat, especially the DPO and DFS; other UN actors; regional organizations; and Member States, so that the international community can learn from past failures, build on past successes, and provide better protection to civilians in armed conflicts in the future.³⁹²

Conclusion

Despite POC being a long-term priority for the Security Council and the wider international community, the global civilian death toll remains consistently high.³⁹³ Peacekeeping missions remain controversial, although recent reports and policy papers have been encouraging the deployment of peacekeeping missions to better protect civilians, with special attention given to vulnerable groups.³⁹⁴ Recent developments in the Security Council's resolutions to shift the conversation towards vulnerable groups have also raised awareness about the importance of understanding the vulnerability and needs of the different segments of civilian population affected by armed conflict.³⁹⁵ Numerous reports have also acknowledged that, despite IHL explicitly stating that civilian lives are valuable and need to be protected, especially through the principle of proportionality, the actual problem lies with states' and armed groups' lack of compliance with international law.³⁹⁶ This goes hand in hand with the lack of concrete and reliable data, which often hinders the international community's ability to fully understand the severity of the occurring conflict situations and provide adequate protection to affected civilians.³⁹⁷

Further Research

As delegates explore the topic at hand, they should consider the following questions: Which groups are considered vulnerable, how are they affected, and is it worth giving them special attention amidst large numbers of threatened civilians? What motivates conflict participants to target medical personnel, and how can they be better protected in future? Which peacekeeping missions succeeded or created a positive impact and which, on the other hand, had negative repercussions on civilians and why? How can the international community learn from these experiences? What gaps exist in the system, and how can the Security Council address them? Are these gaps related to data collection, compliance with international law, or accountability? Should the Security Council take a new approach by focusing more on preventing or resolving conflicts instead of POC?

Geneva Convention Relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War (2nd part). (1949). Retrieved 18 September 2020 from:

<http://www.ohchr.org/EN/ProfessionalInterest/Pages/ProtectionOfCivilianPersons.aspx>

This is an excerpt from the original Geneva Conventions drafted in 1949 after the end of World War II, which still govern the rule of law on armed conflicts. This Fourth Geneva Convention is relevant to the protection of civilians in armed conflict and presents a very important read for delegates to understand the legality of committing war crimes against civilians. It also defines who is considered a protected person and what the different types of conflicts are, thereby defining when protection is applicable.

This opinion paper was published by ICRC in 2008 on defining armed conflict in IHL. It provides definitions for the two types of armed conflict that are classically recognized by IHL: international armed conflict (IAC) and non-international armed conflict (NIAC). Although internationalized armed conflict has recently been identified as a third type, its status within IHL is still a little vague. This opinion paper will prove very useful for delegates to understand how to define armed conflict and differentiate between the different types before proceeding with the remainder of their research.

This policy paper, which OCHA published on the 20th anniversary of Security Council's involvement with POC, gives an overview on what has happened in those 20 years, charts which resolutions were passed, and how they affected the topic. The paper also gives recommendations on the next steps and how Member States should take measures to improve the protection of civilians. Delegates may find this a comprehensive read on the topic to understand what has already happened and decide on the way forward. The policy paper highlights the most important information on the topic and provides a great starting point for further research.

This is the most recent holistic resolution on the protection of civilians in armed conflict. Although there have been multiple other resolutions by the Security Council that followed on the topic, they all more specifically addressed a specific sub-group of civilians. This was the first resolution to establish a set of criteria that govern when to send in humanitarian assistance in times of armed conflict. Delegates are recommended to read this most recent and comprehensive resolution on POC to understand where the Security Council stands today on the topic and which measures have already been adopted. By knowing its substance in greater detail, delegates will also be able to reference this resolution and reaffirm its provisions in their own resolutions.

United Nations, Security Council. (2019). Protection of Civilians in Armed Conflict: Report of the Secretary General (S/2019/373). Retrieved 20 September 2020 from: <https://undocs.org/S/2019/373>

This is the most recent version of the Secretary-General's annual report on POC in armed conflict. It gives an excellent overview of all that has transpired in the past 20 years in the Security Council on this issue. More importantly, it also provides recommendations for the way forward. Delegates may find these recommendations most useful as examples of concrete and realistic ideas they can use as an inspiration for drafting their own working papers and resolutions during the conference.

United Nations Security Council. (2020). Protection of civilians in armed conflict (S/2020/366). Retrieved 17 September 2020 from: <https://undocs.org/S/2020/366>

This is the most recent report of the Secretary General to the Security Council on the current status of POC around the world in 2020. This is the first report on POC by the secretary general to be published since the Security Council passed resolutions 2474 and 2475 in 2019, which call for missing persons and persons with disabilities to be included future annual reports by the secretary general on POC. This report is also the first of its kind to have been published on POC since the emergence of COVID19. It concludes that POC has become more difficult in light of the global COVID19 pandemic, as the spread of the virus has led to further increased demand for healthcare personnel in conflict areas. It also summarizes the progress of POC before the effects of COVID19 were felt. In 2019 the number of civilians killed in conflict areas was in the tens of thousands, and millions were displaced from their homes. Women and girls were particularly vulnerable to indiscriminate attacks from conflict combatants.
