THE SECRETARY-GENERAL

MESSAGE TO NATIONAL MODEL UNITED NATIONS• WASHINGTON, D.C.
CONFERENCE (NMUN•DC)
Washington D.C., 11-13 November 2016

It is a pleasure to convey my best wishes to all those who have come together for this Model United Nations Conference.

You gather at a moment of challenge and opportunity for the human family.

Our world faces formidable threats. Gulfs of mistrust divide citizens from their leaders; extremists push people into camps of “us” and “them”, and the Earth assails us with rising seas and record heat. One hundred and thirty million people need life-saving assistance, tens of millions of them children and young people – the leaders of tomorrow already at risk today.

Yet as I near the end of ten years in office, I am convinced that we have the power to end war, poverty and persecution. With the 17 Sustainable Development Goals, we have a new manifesto for a better future. With the Paris Agreement on climate change, we are tackling the defining challenge of our time. UN Women has become a champion of gender equality and empowerment. The recently adopted New York Declaration on Refugees and Migrants can help us to better address the largest forced displacements of people since the Second World War. And with the timeless values of the UN Charter as our guide, we can stand against those who prey on fear, and stand up for the human rights of all people regardless of ethnicity, religion or sexual orientation.

Young people have the greatest stake in the future, so you must have a voice in building it. The United Nations is strongly committed to working not just for but with young people – with youth at the table and in the room where it happens.

I have visited a great many UN Member States over the past decade. What I have seen, more than government buildings and global landmarks, is the remarkable power of people. A perfect world may be on the far horizon. But a route to a better world, a safer world, a more just world, is in each and every one of us. Ten years on, I know that working together, working united, we can get there. And I am convinced that young people will help lead the way.

Please accept my best wishes for a rewarding Model United Nations Conference. Thank you for your commitment to being lifelong global citizens.

Ban Ki-moon

Dear Honorable Delegates, Faculty Advisors, Staff, and Friends,

It is my great honor to welcome you to the 2016 NMUN•DC Conference. On behalf of the volunteer staff and our conference partners, the National Collegiate Conference Association and the Osgood Center for International Studies, I thank you for joining us for this exciting weekend of debate, negotiation, and compromise.

The last year has brought many changes to the UN's ambitions and efforts. The Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), adopted by acclamation at the opening of the 70th session of the General Assembly, identify universal priorities and represent a shared commitment by all Member States to achieve 17 ambitious goals by 2030. However, the past year has also brought new challenges in the form of terrorism, debate over the rights of refugees, and natural disasters. Each new challenge brings with it a mandate for the UN to find a global solution.

Former Secretary-General Kofi Annan noted that "more than ever before in human history, we share a common destiny. We can master it only if we face it together." The SDGs were negotiated in an unprecedentedly inclusive process. Rather than political elites mandating the post-2015 development agenda, the UN led a multi-year campaign to solicit perspectives from persons typically excluded from the policy process. In particular, young people were identified as a key constituent group in developing and implementing the SDGs. The UN recognizes that achieving the targets identified in the goals will require the knowledge and skills of the world's youth – of people like you.

As you prepare for your committee sessions, I challenge you to think broadly and creatively to find common ground with your fellow delegates. While you are all representing your assigned Member State, you are doing so in the role of a diplomat. As the adoption by acclamation of the SDGs illustrates, we have far more in common than that which divides us. Your job this weekend is to achieve consensus and to escape the gridlock that so often plagues elected representatives in various world capitals, including here in Washington, D.C.

When you read the biographies of our conference speakers and guests, you'll notice a common theme: many of today's diplomats and policy experts participated in Model UN. This conference is a simulation, but the lessons you can learn are very real. We hope this weekend will be the impetus for your individual efforts to influence policy, resolve conflicts, and transform our world.

Sincerely,

Lauren E Shaw

DELEGATES

While participating in the National Model UN conference, delegates have a responsibility to always maintain the highest level of professionalism and diplomacy. Conference staff, faculty advisors, fellow delegates, speakers, as well as non-NMUN hotel guests should be treated with the highest level of courtesy and respect, including on social media and in electronic communications. Professionalism in speech, actions, and appearance by delegates is a requirement of this conference, and necessary to its educational mission. It is assumed that all delegates will respect the property of our host hotel and any other facilities utilized.

NMUN reserves the right to restrict future registration for any participant or school, whose delegates or faculty advisors are not able to uphold their responsibility to the conference's code of conduct.

Delegates are expected to:

- Remain "in character" by consistently advocating the interests and representing the policies of the country assigned. To act "in character" also entails displaying respect for the opinions and ideas of fellow delegates, even if these opinions and ideas conflict with a given delegate's own country's priorities.
- Collaborate with fellow delegates when possible.
- Be courteous and professional at all times, including on social media and in electronic communications.
- Attend all committee sessions.
- Avoid the consumption of alcohol and other drugs in committee sessions. Any issues related to illicit drugs will be immediately directed to the attention of local authorities.

Delegates who disrupt committee sessions or create problems in the hotel or other facilities may be barred from further participation in the conference.

Delegates are encouraged to enjoy the variety of activities available at our conference venues. Please bear in mind, however, the purpose of being here is participation in NMUN and failure to attend committee sessions may result in your withdrawal from the conference.

If you are going to drink, please drink responsibly. Excessive alcohol consumption should be avoided. The U.S. legal drinking age is 21.

FACULTY ADVISORS

The role of faculty advisors, while at the conference, is to make all efforts to see that their students maintain a positive and professional approach to the conference. The educational quality of the conference is primarily dependent on the active and professional participation of all delegates. Faculty advisors can ensure this by monitoring the attendance of their students at committee meetings and helping them understand the skills of diplomacy as practiced at National Model United Nations. Faculty advisors must maintain the highest level of professionalism toward all conference participants and staff.

During the conference, faculty advisors are encouraged to advise students on specific questions such as a Member State's policy or issues of international law, but must not participate in the actual writing of resolutions or caucusing activities. NMUN allows students an opportunity to demonstrate their preparation and research skills. While faculty advisors are encouraged to quietly observe their students from the back of committee rooms, participation in the committee process must be left to the student delegates and the conference staff.

Faculty Advisors are expected to:

- Provide leadership to their delegates and to other delegations by serving as information resources when appropriate.
- Respond to questions and concerns without interfering with the work of the committees or the deliberations of delegates, whether in formal session or in caucus.
- Refrain from using academic credit and grading policies that force participation beyond that country's normal position in the UN.
- Remind their delegates of the educational purpose of the simulation. Awards should not be a delegation's main emphasis.
- Offer suggestions and assistance to new faculty advisors.

HEAD DELEGATES

Head delegates provide leadership to their delegates and to other delegations by serving as information resources. They should attend and participate in head delegates meetings. Head delegates may be assigned to a committee or may serve solely in an advisory role. Head delegates assigned to a committee should observe the delegate code of conduct. Those not assigned to a particular committee should interact with delegates as would a faculty advisor.

DRESS CODE

All clothing must adhere to guidelines that portray professionalism and modesty. If a delegate's attire is deemed inappropriate by NMUN staff, the delegate will be asked to leave the session and return with appropriate attire.

- Standard delegate attire for the conference is business jacket, slacks/skirt, dress shirt (with tie for men) and dress shoes.
- Dress sweaters, shorts, ball caps, jeans, sneakers and sunglasses are considered too casual. Clothes that expose excessive bare skin or are otherwise revealing are inappropriate.
- It is not appropriate for delegates to display any national symbols such as flags, pins, crests, etc. on their person during sessions. UN symbols are acceptable.
- Western business dress is preferred. Traditional dress is only permitted for international delegates in whose native countries professional business dress includes traditional cultural dress. NMUN will not tolerate any delegate's attempt to portray a "character" using traditional cultural attire as costume.

Faculty advisors/team leaders, guests, and volunteer staff serve as role models for delegates. Thus they are required to dress in western business attire while participating in scheduled conference sessions.

SEXUAL HARASSMENT AND DISCRIMINATION POLICY

It is the intention of the NCCA that the environment of National Model United Nations supports our educational goal. We will not tolerate any instances of sexual harassment or discrimination based on race, color, sex, sexual orientation, national origin, religion, age or disability.

If any delegate, faculty advisor, team leader, guest, or volunteer believes they have encountered sexual harassment or discrimination, which results in a hostile working environment or disparate treatment, they must bring it to the attention of the Secretary-General of the conference. In the event that this is not possible, they must bring it to the attention of the NCCA. We will investigate the merits of the allegations, interviewing all parties involved.

Based on the findings of the investigation, organizers may:

- take no action
- issue a verbal reprimand
- separate the individual from the conference
- implement any other action deemed appropriate

For information on the procedure for addressing code of conduct violations see: nmun.org/policies_codes.html.

Delegations Awards

National Model United Nations has established criteria for evaluating delegate performance. Each element is equally important to the overall awards determination process. All committees are weighted equally, and delegations are rated on a mathematical formula in relation to the total number of committees represented by the individual Member State.

Areas of evaluation are:

- Remaining in character - defined as advocating your assigned country's position in a manner consistent with economic, social and geopolitical constraints.
- Participating in committee - evaluated both during formal sessions and caucusing.
- Proper use of the rules of procedure - NMUN uses the rules of procedure to facilitate effective workings of committee and debate.

For Awards Criteria see: nmun.org/policies_codes.html.

ASU Law's Rule of Law & Governance Program

ASU Sandra Day O'Connor
College of Law
Arizona State University

- Based in Washington D.C., ASU Law's Rule of Law & Governance Program is an academic and experiential learning program designed to prepare LLM, MLS, and JD students for jobs that promote justice, human rights, sustainable economic development, and equality under the law across the globe.
- Learn from top experts such as Distinguished Professor of Practice Clint Williamson, former U.S. Ambassador for War Crimes Issues. He has served as a state and federal prosecutor, a White House policy maker, a United Nations war crimes investigator and prosecutor, and a senior official in peacekeeping missions.
- Operational programs complement the academic program, offering students opportunities to do overseas internships during the summer as well as research projects during the semester.

These are only a few of the global issues our students are tackling at Indiana University's new School of Global and International Studies. Spanning the humanities and social sciences, SGIS students study crucial contemporary issues that transcend any one nation or region of the world, plus they master the language skills and cultural competencies necessary to be globally ready.

Your global career starts at Bloomington — the home of Indiana University's flagship campus. "B-town," as the students affectionately call it. It is the best of both worlds, pairing the vibe and energy of an urban neighborhood with the charm and warmth of a college town. An international community in the heart of the Midwest, our students are prepared to lead in a variety of global careers.

Come see for yourself by visiting campus!

Bloomington, Indiana is a top U.S. city for launching an international career, according to LinkedIn.
