Dear Delegates,

Welcome to the 2026 National Model United Nations Washington DC Conference (NMUN•DC)! We are pleased to introduce you to your committee, the Security Council. Your committee's work is facilitated by volunteer staffers. This year's committee staff are: Director Smrithi Upadhyayula and Assistant Director Andrew Kirk. Smrithi is a fourth year medical student from Texas, United States of America, who has been involved with NMUN since she was in college. Her interests include science communication, film criticism, and applying emerging technologies to medical education. Andrew is in his third year of university, pursuing a Bachelor's Degree in International Relations with minors in Geography and Spanish, and he also works full time at his county's Public Defender's Office. The preparation of these materials was supported by Under-Secretaries-General Kaytlyn Marcotte, Catherine Tomczyk, and Tobias Willms, and Secretary-General, Ashlee Rolheiser.

The topics on the agenda for this committee are:

1. Protection of Civilians in Armed Conflict
2. The Situation in Gaza and the West Bank

The Security Council is one of the six principal organs of the United Nations which seeks to maintain international peace and security and oversees changes to the Charter of the United Nations (1945). Traditionally, the Security Council discusses issues related to conflict, peacebuilding and peacekeeping missions, the protection of human rights, disarmament, and humanitarian crises. However, since 2015, the Security Council has begun to increasingly focus on the intersection between sustainability, peace, and security. The Security Council is composed of five permanent members China, France, Russia, the United Kingdom, and the United States of America and 10 non-permanent members which serve two year terms.

This Background Guide serves as an introduction to the topics for this committee. However, it is not intended to replace individual research. We encourage you to explore your Member State's policies in depth and use the bibliography to further your knowledge on these topics. In preparation for the conference, each delegation should submit a Position Paper by 11:59 p.m. ET (DC time) on 15 October 2026 in accordance with the guidelines in the Position Paper Guide and the NMUN•DC Position Papers website.

Two resources, available to download from the NMUN website, serve as essential instruments in preparing for the conference and as a reference during committee sessions:

- The NMUN Delegate Preparation Guide, which explains each step in the delegate process, from pre-conference research to the committee debate and resolution drafting processes. Please take note of the information on plagiarism and the prohibition on pre-written working papers and resolutions.
- The NMUN Rules of Procedure, which includes the long and short form of the rules, as well as an explanatory narrative and example script of the flow of procedure.

In addition, please review the mandatory NMUN Conduct Expectations on the NMUN website. They include the conference dress code and other expectations of all attendees. We want to emphasize that any instances of sexual harassment or discrimination based on race, gender, sexual orientation, national origin, religion, age, or disability will not be tolerated. If you have any questions concerning your preparation for this committee, please contact Under-Secretary-General, Catherine Tomczyk, at dcusg.catherine@nmunstaff.org or the Secretary-General, Ashlee Rolheiser, at secgen.dc@nmun.org.

We wish you all the best in your preparations and look forward to seeing you at the conference!

Committee Overview

Introduction

The Security Council is one of the six principal organs of the United Nations defined by the Charter of the United Nations (1945).¹ The Security Council seeks to maintain international peace and security and oversees changes to the Charter.² As the Security Council is the only United Nations body that can create legally binding decisions for all Member States under Chapter VII of the Charter, it has a unique and impactful mandate to set norms and govern Member State actions.³ Traditionally, the Security Council discusses issues related to conflict, peacebuilding and peacekeeping missions, the protection of human rights, disarmament, and humanitarian crises.⁴ With the 2015 adoption General Assembly resolution 70/1 on “Transforming our world: the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development” (2030 Agenda) by the General Assembly, the Security Council has begun to focus increasingly on the intersection between sustainability, peace, and security.⁵

Mandate, Function and Powers

The Security Council's mandate is particularly relevant with respect to the United Nations' four primary purposes, as specified in the Charter: maintaining international peace and security; developing friendly relations among Member States; cooperating in solving international problems; and promoting respect for human rights.⁶ The capabilities of the Security Council are highlighted in Chapters V-VIII of the Charter.⁷ Chapter V establishes the structure, membership, functions, and powers of the Security Council.⁸ Chapters VI and VII specifically address the range of actions that the Security Council can take when settling disputes.⁹ Chapter VI aims to settle disputes through peaceful means, such as negotiation and judicial settlement.¹⁰ Chapter VII explores further actions that can be taken regarding threats to peace, breaches of peace, and acts of aggression.¹¹ This chapter also authorizes the Security Council to implement provisional measures aimed at de-escalating conflict situations, including the deployment of peacekeeping forces and sanctions.¹² Chapter VIII allows the Security Council to call upon other regional agencies or arrangements to enforce appropriate operations and intervene if necessary.¹³

While the following list is not exhaustive, the mandate of the Security Council can be summarized as:

- The Security Council will generally: make policy recommendations that are conducive to the maintenance of international peace and security; call on Member States to apply economic sanctions and measures not involving the use of force; call for arms embargoes; enforce disarmament; call upon international judicial mechanisms to become active; use diplomatic tools to investigate situations that might lead to aggression (between Member States, non-State groups, and within state territories); authorize military action against states or entities threatening international peace and security.¹⁴
- The Security Council will not generally: intervene and enact enforcement measures unless a threat to international peace and security can be determined; encourage the use of force unless it considers that non-military measures already taken have proven inadequate.¹⁵

Governance, Funding and Structure

The Security Council is the only United Nations body that has the power to adopt legally binding resolutions, as Article 25 of the Charter obligates Member States to accept and carry out the Council's decisions.¹⁶ The Security Council also has a variety of other tools to address issues on its agenda.¹⁷ For example, the President of the Security Council, which rotates on a monthly basis, may issue press statements or presidential statements to communicate the Council's position.¹⁸ Although not legally binding, such statements are used to bring attention to important issues and to recommend solutions to ongoing conflicts.¹⁹

The Security Council was initially composed of five permanent members and six non-permanent members.²⁰ In 1965, the number of non-permanent members was increased to 10.²¹ As the body's structure has remained largely unchanged, debates over the Security Council's efficacy and authority as a mediator on issues of international security continue.²² The five permanent members are China, France, Russia, the United Kingdom, and the United States of America, often colloquially referred to as the "P5."²³ Every year, the General Assembly elects five of the 10 non-permanent members for a two-year term.²⁴

Every Member State of the Security Council has one vote.²⁵ Votes on all matters (substantive votes) require affirmative votes of nine Member States rather than a simple majority.²⁶ However, if one of the five permanent members of the Security Council casts a negative vote on a matter of substance, such as a

1. The Protection of Civilians in Armed Conflict

"The Geneva Conventions insist: every human life is equally worth of protection."³¹

Introduction

The United Nations Secretary-General urges strict adherence to international humanitarian law (IHL) as a method of protecting civilians in response to record-breaking displacement trends.³² Roughly 168 million people face serious risk of gender-based violence, psychological abuse, attacks on critical infrastructure like medical and agricultural facilities, forced displacement from homes, and forced recruitment into armed conflict, according to the Global Protection Cluster, a network of non-governmental organizations (NGOs) led by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR).³³ As of June 2025, more than 117 million people worldwide faced displacement because of conflict and violence, with UNHCR citing this as the highest level of displacement on record.³⁴ Article 50 of the Additional Protocol 1 to the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War (1949), or the Fourth Geneva Convention, defines civilians as all persons who are not members of armed forces or organized armed groups, therefore entitling them to protections under Articles 2 and 3 of the Convention, in which civilians are protected from acts such as violence, torture, degrading treatment, and execution.³⁵

The Security Council holds the responsibility of producing binding measures in response to threats to the security of civilians and vulnerable groups that face violence, including the use of United Nations Peacekeeping missions and Security Council-mandated military operations.³⁶ The 2023 policy, The Protection of Civilians in United Nations Peacekeeping of the United Nations Department of Peace Operations, which builds on the standards established in preexisting Security Council mandates, highlights the need for flexibility to adapt to changing environments during civilian-focused operations, while also prioritizing the protection of civilians (PoC).³⁷ This peacekeeping mandate begins with a dialogue- and mediation-first approach, followed by physical protection when civilians are at immediate risk.³⁸ Through Security Council resolution 1674 (2006) on the "Protection of civilians in armed conflict," the responsibility of parties involved in conflict to protect populations from all forms of violence, together with the condemnation of deliberate targeting of civilians, sets a precedent for the inclusion of PoC in peace and security discussions.³⁹ Additionally, this resolution highlights the particular impact of conflict on children facing forced recruitment and association with armed groups, reaffirming the responsibility of all parties to take all necessary steps to ensure the safety of these vulnerable groups in times of armed conflict.⁴⁰ The Security Council considers violations of humanitarian and human rights law a threat to international peace, including the rights of civilians and non-participating parties to armed conflict, as stated in Security Council resolution 1296 (2000) on the “Protection of civilians in armed conflict.”⁴¹ Thus, in instances of the targeting of civilians, the Security Council maintains the responsibility and ability to use sanctions, peacekeeping missions, and dispute resolutions as means of protecting international peace.⁴²

International and Regional Framework

The Fourth Geneva Convention was a direct response to World War II, highlighting the basic rights of civilians and non-participating parties in occupied territories as standard principles of IHL, but as the nature of conflicts changed, the creation of additional protocols became necessary.⁴³ In 1977, Additional Protocol 1 was created to articulate the principles of foreign occupation and racist regimes, targeting the effects of international armed conflict on civilians.⁴⁴ Additional Protocol 1 emphasizes the importance of adhering to IHL, establishes standards to limit the effects of armed conflict on non-participants, creates a permanent fact-finding and advisory body, the International Fact-Finding Commission, and categorizes breaches of IHL as possible war crimes.⁴⁵ This emphasis on IHL adherence is also seen in one of the earliest PoC-focused resolutions passed by the Security Council, resolution 1265 (1999) on the “Protection of civilians in armed conflict,” which calls upon Member States to adhere to IHL and the standards set by the Geneva Conventions and the resolutions of the Security Council.⁴⁶ Additional Protocol II extended the obligation of states to adhere to the convention during internal conflicts as civilians are disproportionately vulnerable.⁴⁷

The Security Council established a standard of ensuring humanitarian access in conflict settings through protections for humanitarian aid operations and humanitarian exemptions during Security Council sanctions.⁴⁸ Security Council resolution 2417 (2018) on the “Protection of civilians in armed conflict” connects food insecurity and armed conflict by formally condemning the use of starvation as a method of warfare, as it can be a driver of forced displacement.⁴⁹ Similarly, Security Council resolution 2565 (2021) on the “Maintenance of international peace and security” highlights the importance of access to health and medical services in conflict settings and calls for pauses in conflict to facilitate vaccine distribution, as a response to unequal access to COVID-19 vaccines and the disproportionate risk to civilians' health outcomes in these settings.⁵⁰ The 1994 Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel establishes protections for civilians engaged in humanitarian and peace operations, working as the foundation for the aforementioned resolutions.⁵¹ 30 years later, Security Council resolution 2730 (2024) highlighted the growing distrust of the United Nations and humanitarian organizations in the delivery of critical programs in the context of the COVID-19 pandemic and the conflict in the Middle East, and reemphasized the protections for United Nations and humanitarian personnel against targeting and detention, as well as their functional immunity from legal processes in the host state, as standards of IHL.⁵²

The General Assembly engages in cooperation to maintain peace, for example, through formal recommendations to the Security Council to promote IHL.⁵³ In 1970, the General Assembly adopted resolution 2675 (1970) on "Basic principles for the protection of civilian populations in armed conflict," which emphasized the importance of continued respect for IHL, civilian protections, and human rights during times of armed conflict.⁵⁴ This resolution also asserts that dwellings, hospital zones, and similar refuges under civilian use should not be the object of military operations.⁵⁵ Article 20 of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC) highlights the need for special protections for children, including protection from the recruitment of child soldiers and attacks on facilities necessary for their development, such as schools and hospitals.⁵⁶ This convention serves as the basis of the mandate of the Security Council Working Group on Children and Armed Conflict.⁵⁷ General Assembly resolution 60/1, entitled "2005 World Summit Outcome," introduces the concept of the Responsibility to Protect (R2P), according to which Member States are required to protect populations against genocide, war crimes, ethnic cleansing, and crimes against humanity through appropriate means, including humanitarian interventions and diplomacy.⁵⁸ The concept of R2P applies at all times, while PoC-focused peacekeeping missions have limited regional mandates regarding the protection from physical harm.⁵⁹

Respective regional PoC standards have been established in the European Union (EU) and the African Union (AU), combining the IHL standard with unique regional implementation and interpretation.⁶⁰ The EU adopted the EU Guidelines on the promotion of compliance with international humanitarian law, setting standards for interactions with the rest of the world that ensure respect for IHL and classify violations of civilian protections as war crimes and sanctionable offenses.⁶¹ In addition, the EU Action Plan on Human Rights and Democracy prioritizes defending human rights and reaffirms the EU's commitment to upholding IHL and the PoC.⁶² The AU established regional PoC standards through its Constitutive Act, citing war crimes, genocide, and crimes against humanity as cases allowing for humanitarian interventions using armed force under Article 4.⁶³ A decade later, the AU adopted the African Union Policy on the Protection of Civilians in Peace Support Operations, which established a more practical application of the regional PoC standard for armed missions to prevent violence and support humanitarian actors during an intervention.⁶⁴

Role of the International System

The Security Council explicitly envisions United Nations Peacekeeping missions as a tool to protect civilians from physical violence.⁶⁵ The 75th anniversary of the 1949 Geneva Conventions, the Protection of Civilians Week 2024, welcomed discussion from Member States and humanitarian organizations to mark 25 years since the Security Council mandated the United Nations peacekeeping mission to protect civilians from threats of violence, resulting in calls for investments in early warning systems, strategic communication, and long-term capacity building of Member States to foster self-sustaining PoC.⁶⁶ Peacekeeping mandates ensure the PoC within their given operation, with a focus on activities such as dialogue and advocacy, support for reconciliation, peace agreements or mediation, the provision of physical protection, usually by deterring attacks on civilians through patrolling, and the establishment of protective environments where civilians are less at risk of violence.⁶⁷ While Member States hold the primary responsibility, under R2P, to protect civilians from violence, Security Council peacekeeping mandates and other humanitarian actors contribute to protection plans.⁶⁸

The United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA) and the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) are two United Nations bodies that actively work towards PoC development and IHL compliance through monitoring and reporting systems.⁶⁹ OCHA is involved in PoC discussions alongside the Security Council, delivering the Secretary-General's reports and briefings on PoC to the committee.⁷⁰ OCHA also briefs on behalf of humanitarian organizations at Security Council sessions and engages in dialogue with Member States and other international organizations.⁷¹ Additionally, OCHA conducts field work by promoting cooperation and protection at United Nations peacekeeping missions.⁷² The regional missions under OHCHR conduct field research to monitor and report findings on the human rights impact of international armed conflict in the region.⁷³ OHCHR has developed a “reasonable grounds to believe” methodology that requires a standard degree of objective evidence that violations have occurred, collected by one of the fact-finding and monitoring missions.⁷⁴

In addition to United Nations bodies, the Organization of American States (OAS) and the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) conduct sessions of open dialogue with focused reporting and monitoring on conflicts impacting civilians.⁷⁵ The Inter-American Commission on Human Rights works as an advisory body to the OAS by delivering annual reports based on regional monitoring missions.⁷⁶ This advisory body also accepts and hears cases or petitions submitted by individuals, with the threat of violence listed as an imminent risk and warranting dialogue with members of civil society.⁷⁷ The main function of this organization is to make recommendations based on the findings of these petitions, but under grave circumstances, requests for undefined provisional measures can be made to the Inter-American Court.⁷⁸ Similarly, the ASEAN Intergovernmental Commission on Human Rights (AICHR) conducts preemptive dialogue on regional tensions and possible conflict resolution to promote two major organizational pillars: conflict prevention and conflict management.⁷⁹ In 2025, AICHR held peace-pathways workshops to discuss histories of conflict-based human rights violations and developments that could be made to prevent further violations, with embedding human rights and civilian protection into ASEAN’s framework being one possible solution.⁸⁰

Various NGOs, programs, and regional bodies work towards securing PoC and standardizing IHL in all aspects.⁸¹ Working alongside national Red Cross and Red Crescent societies, the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) holds open dialogues as a means of conflict resolution and PoC with the inclusion of voices from states.⁸² ICRC has a preferred method of bilateral and confidential dialogue to remind governments, armed groups, and non-state groups of their obligation to protect civilians, while also conducting field operations to help non-participants.⁸³ Similar to ICRC, Geneva Call, an independent humanitarian organization working towards the recognition of PoC within the mandates and operations of NGOs, highlights the protection of vulnerable groups like women and children in armed conflict.⁸⁴ The work of Geneva Call pushes the standards of PoC and IHL to non-state actors through formal commitments and agreements, broadening the participation of these norms outside of intergovernmental organizations.⁸⁵ While these two examples highlight the use of dialogue in PoC, the International Criminal

Court is the only permanent international court used to prosecute individuals accused of crimes against humanity, war crimes, genocide, and aggression.⁸⁶ This court acts as a court of last resort, but represents the international interest in IHL and the consideration of violations of PoC as war crimes.⁸⁷

The Protection of Children in Armed Conflict

The Security Council Working Group on Children and Armed Conflict reviews monitoring mechanisms and produces conclusions and recommendations to Member States and other humanitarian bodies to promote the protection of children in armed conflict.⁸⁸ This Working Group acts upon a mandate pursuant to Security Council resolution 1612 (2005) and formally condemns the recruitment and use of child soldiers, whilst also conducting an annual review of violations against children affected by conflict.⁸⁹ Parties to a conflict that recruit and use child soldiers are deemed to be in violation of international obligations in accordance with Security Council resolution 1539 (2004) on “Children and armed conflict,” and the CRC, along with its Optional Protocol on child soldiers.⁹⁰ The Working Group’s 2025 annual report highlighted investigations into possible violations by many Member States.⁹¹ The reporting system of the Working Group includes the findings of representatives of the Member States involved, the Working Group, and NGOs to collect evidence and testimonials.⁹² The 2025 report details the operations and outcomes of the fact-finding mission and related recommendations made to Member States.⁹³ In this report, the Working Group condemned the six grave violations: killing and maiming of children; recruitment or use of children as soldiers; sexual violence against children; abduction of children; attacks against schools or hospitals; and denial of humanitarian access for children.⁹⁴ The Working Group also highlighted an increase in the recruitment of child soldiers and urged an immediate end to all such recruitment, followed by an unconditional release of child soldiers to child protection services for rehabilitation and reintegration.⁹⁵ Following these recommendations, six commanders in the Member States mentioned in the report made commitments to protect children and to establish screening mechanisms to prevent the recruitment of children following the release of 430 children.⁹⁶

According to the 2025 Report of the United Nations Secretary-General, 2024 saw a 25% increase in grave violations against children compared with 2023 and was the third consecutive year with such alarming figures.⁹⁷ These grave violations came in the form of a 44% increase in attacks on schools, a 35% increase in sexual violence, and the recruitment of child soldiers affecting an estimated over 20,000 children.⁹⁸ Within these documented abuses, around half of all reports come from violations committed by armed, non-state actors.⁹⁹ Alongside this report, the Office of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict classifies child soldiers as victims and detention is not in the best interest of the child.¹⁰⁰ United Nations Peacekeeping and the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) recommend reintegration into civil society, defined as the process in which children transition back into society and enter meaningful roles in The Paris Principles: Principles and Guidelines on Children Associated with Armed Forces or Armed Groups (Paris Principles) (2007).¹⁰¹ The Paris Principles are a series of formal commitments that Member States may endorse to support the recovery and rehabilitation of former child soldiers.¹⁰² It is the mandated responsibility of UNICEF to implement reintegration through psychological support, education, and vocational programs with the goal of reuniting children with their families.¹⁰³ However, not all disengaged children have been able to benefit from reintegration, as only 70% of the children who took part in these programs were successfully reintegrated, which has led the Global Coalition for the Reintegration of Child Soldiers, an initiative bringing together international organizations, Member States, civil society, and academia, to make overarching recommendations to improve the reintegration process.¹⁰⁴ These recommendations focus on the shared responsibility of Member States, non-state groups, and humanitarian organizations to provide rehabilitation and reintegration programs for periods of 3 to 5 years, with additional research necessary to improve the system.¹⁰⁵ Despite the progress made in preventing the recruitment and use of child soldiers, children continue to be affected in other ways, for example by losing access to clean water, medical care, and education services, which creates impacts that can last a lifetime.¹⁰⁶

Attacks on Critical Infrastructure and Increased Humanitarian Need

Critical infrastructure such as water and food systems, healthcare facilities, and energy grids face disruption and destruction that directly cause high levels of civilian casualties and displacement during armed conflict, increasing the need for easily accessible humanitarian aid.¹⁰⁷ In 2023, the Secretary-General submitted a report to the Security Council detailing the severe humanitarian crises that result from attacks on critical infrastructure, highlighting the 149,000 people affected by the destruction of only 48 water facilities.¹⁰⁸ This statistic emphasizes the adverse effects of infrastructure attacks and the dependence civilians have on already limited resources.¹⁰⁹ Security Council resolution 2573 (2021) on the "Protection of civilians in armed conflict" categorizes attacks resulting in the deprivation of objects indispensable to the survival of civilians as a violation of IHL.¹¹⁰ ICRC provides guidance on critical infrastructure and reiterates the duty and obligation of all actors to refrain from attacking basic civilian services.¹¹¹ The classification of these attacks as violations of IHL and the recommendation of ICRC to avoid critical infrastructure are proactive measures to avoid dependence on humanitarian aid.¹¹² As many facilities and resources become technologically dependent, the Secretary-General has urged Member States to prevent warfare in cyberspace as it will greatly affect the functioning of society.¹¹³

As critical infrastructure is targeted in armed conflict, the need for humanitarian aid is heightened, and according to Security Council resolution 1296 (2000), blocking access to aid and humanitarian personnel is a violation of IHL and a threat to international peace and security.¹¹⁴ This resolution has become a foundational document in ensuring access to humanitarian personnel and aid, in the development of additional training for cohesive cooperation between Member States and United Nations personnel, and in the creation of guidelines to ensure that victims of conflict maintain access to basic human necessities.¹¹⁵ In paragraph 13 of this resolution, the Security Council calls for adequate resources for peacekeeping missions to ensure rapid responses and the deployment of humanitarian corridors to provide aid.¹¹⁶ In addition to the development of humanitarian personnel training, Security Council resolution 2664 (2022) focuses on open humanitarian access.¹¹⁷ This resolution emphasizes the necessity for humanitarian aid to be exempt from measures imposed by the Security Council, such as sanctions and asset freezes, as support for basic human needs is a time-sensitive process.¹¹⁸ This system allows the Security Council to continue to utilize sanctioning power, while ensuring civilians with limited resources are still protected.¹¹⁹

Conclusion

With the fast-changing nature of armed conflict through shifting geopolitics and the need for international cooperation, the work towards PoC must constantly adapt, which it has done for over 25 years as a main item on the Security Council agenda.¹²⁰ With developments made in the protection of humanitarian personnel and missions, demobilizing child soldiers, and the evolution of IHL-related violations and limitations, much progress has been made.¹²¹ Recognition of PoC has grown among NGOs and regional organizations like the EU and AU, alongside the growing acknowledgement of R2P among Member States.¹²² Civilians continue to make up the majority of casualties in armed conflict; they face a heightened trend of displacement, there is a spike in the recruitment of child soldiers, and humanitarian aid has limited access to regions facing conflict, which is why OCHA stresses that the discussion must continue.¹²³

Further Research

Delegates should consider the following: What additional violations of IHL have gone unnamed under the definition and conditions? How can Security Council-mandated peacekeeping missions develop to better achieve the PoC? In addition to the measures created to prevent the recruitment and use of child soldiers, what measures can be taken to demobilize and reintegrate them? Is the focus on the six grave violations against children sufficient, or must it be expanded? How can civilian access to education, healthcare, and food facilities be protected in times of conflict?

2. The Situation in Gaza and the West Bank

*"The nightmare in Gaza is more than a humanitarian crisis. It is a crisis of humanity."*¹²⁴

Introduction

Sovereignty over the Palestinian territory has been contested since the end of the British Mandate in 1948.¹²⁵ In 1947, General Assembly resolution 181 (II) entitled "Future government of Palestine" proposed dividing the territory of Palestine, bordered by Lebanon, Jordan, and Egypt, into a Jewish and an Arab state.¹²⁶ In the 1967 Six-Day War, the State of Israel declared itself as the Jewish state and took control of East Jerusalem, the Gaza Strip, and the West Bank, which are now referred to as the Occupied Palestinian Territory (OPT).¹²⁷ Hamas, or the "Islamic Resistance Movement," arose in 1987 after the first Palestinian intifada, or uprising against Israeli control in Gaza, and has since worked toward an independent Palestinian state through managing local administration in Gaza and taking military action against Israel.¹²⁸ In 1988, the State of Palestine declared independence and claimed sovereignty over the OPT.¹²⁹ Since 2012, Palestine has been a non-voting Observer State at the United Nations, recognized by 143 of its 193 Member States.¹³⁰

On 7 October 2023, Hamas launched an attack in southern Israel and took 252 hostages, triggering a war between Israel and Palestine that has significantly worsened the humanitarian situation in the Gaza Strip.¹³¹ Through General Assembly resolution 46/182 (1991) on the "Strengthening of the coordination of humanitarian emergency assistance of the United Nations," the committee defined humanitarian aid as lifesaving assistance to those affected by crises rooted in the principles of humanity, impartiality, neutrality, and independence.¹³² The day after the Hamas attack, Israel formally declared war against Hamas, intending to dismantle Hamas and return all hostages, citing its right to defend itself under Article 51 of the Charter of the United Nations.¹³³ Hamas released some hostages in exchange for Palestinian prisoners during November 2023 and January 2025 negotiations, but not all hostages were returned until

October 2025.¹³⁴ Over 100,000 Palestinians have been killed, reported missing, or wounded in connection with this conflict, and over a million have been displaced.¹³⁵

Since the 1990s, Israel has placed security restrictions on the movement of people and goods into the OPT.¹³⁶ The entry of “dual-use” items such as construction and medical supplies and communications equipment that Israel believes could be stolen and repurposed by terror groups is restricted.¹³⁷ These items are formally listed in the Defense Export Control Order of 2008.¹³⁸ The list includes 56 items, such as tent poles and medical equipment, that require special approval to enter the OPT, and 61 additional items that are regulated by Israeli security forces upon entry into Gaza.¹³⁹

In the occupied West Bank, Israeli state-backed settler violence targets Bedouin and herding communities.¹⁴⁰ Israeli settlers erect outposts within these communities, restrict the locals’ access to land and water, and conduct attacks of theft, arson, and interpersonal violence to force the locals from their homes.¹⁴¹ The Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) reports that, since 2023, these attacks have displaced six herding communities comprising 112 families in the north Jordan Valley, and the pace of settlement expansion continues to hasten.¹⁴² Since the inception of this conflict, the Security Council has called for the sustained cessation of hostilities and endorsed a vision for the peaceful coexistence of Israel and a Palestinian state, made explicit in its resolution 1397 (2002), on “The situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question.”¹⁴³

The modern Israeli-Palestinian conflict began in 1947 when Arab states rejected the original borders established in resolution 181 (II), deeming the allocation of more than half the territory to the Jewish minority to be unjust and unaligned with their vision of a unified Palestinian state.¹⁴⁴ In 1948, fighting broke out between Arab and Jewish communities over the proposed partition of the territory, leading to the displacement of 700,000 Palestinians from their homes and the beginning of the Palestinian refugee crisis.¹⁴⁵ Subsequent General Assembly resolutions 194 (III) (1948) on “Palestine - Progress Report of the United Nations Mediator,” and 302 (IV) (1949) on “Assistance to Palestine Refugees” became the basis for Palestinian refugee assistance by creating the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) and establishing the principle of “right of return,” which is the Palestinian refugees’ right to reclaim the homes they have fled once it is safe to return.¹⁴⁶ Security Council resolution 242 (1967) on “The situation in the Middle East” was adopted after the Six-Day War and became the basis for the so-called “land for peace” diplomacy, a principle that continues to guide peace negotiations in the Middle East today and under which Israel trades occupied territory for acceptance by its Arab neighbors.¹⁴⁷

The 1995 Israeli-Palestinian Interim Agreement on the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (Oslo II Agreement), the most recent agreement on territorial control in the OPT, divided the West Bank into three areas.¹⁴⁸ It was a follow-up to the 1993 Oslo I Declaration of Principles, which created the Palestinian Authority as an interim self-governing body for the West Bank and representative of Palestine as an Observer State at the United Nations.¹⁴⁹ This division was meant to be temporary but remains largely in effect today as “final status” talks in 2000 and 2001 failed to produce a permanent agreement.¹⁵⁰ A report of the Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process marking the 30th anniversary of Oslo II noted that escalating violence on the ground has stalled any further attempts at final status negotiations.¹⁵¹

The General Assembly and Security Council have adopted several resolutions focused on humanitarian pauses, access, and ceasefires in the recent Gaza war.¹⁵² Security Council resolution 2720 (2023) on “The situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question” demands that all parties facilitate aid and that all available border crossings be used for this purpose.¹⁵³ This resolution also established the UN2720 Mechanism, which is the current United Nations framework for ensuring access to essential supplies in Gaza while addressing Israeli security concerns regarding their diversion by Hamas.¹⁵⁴ Security Council resolution 2728 (2024) on the same agenda item explicitly links the cessation of hostilities with humanitarian access, underscoring that a ceasefire is a pathway to ensuring that aid can flow effectively.¹⁵⁵ Between 2023 and 2025, members of the Security Council proposed six draft resolutions calling for an unconditional ceasefire, which were vetoed by the United States, citing a failure to condemn Hamas or recognize Israel’s right to defend itself under Article 51 of the Charter of the United Nations.¹⁵⁶ In April 2024, the Security Council considered a draft resolution to grant full United Nations membership to Palestine, which was ultimately vetoed by the United States.¹⁵⁷

In 2024, the International Court of Justice (ICJ) concluded that Israel's occupation of the West Bank and related policies, including settlement expansion, "violate international law and must end without delay."¹⁵⁸ According to Article 49 of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War (Fourth Geneva Convention), an occupying power may not transfer portions of its civilian population into occupied territory.¹⁵⁹ The Fourth Geneva Convention also prohibits an occupying power from depriving civilians of food and medical supplies and from destroying their private property, unless necessary for military objectives.¹⁶⁰ The Human Rights Council reaffirmed that Israeli settlements in the occupied West Bank are illegal under international law through its resolution 58/28 on "Israeli settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and in the occupied Syrian Golan" and that Palestinians have the right to self-determination through resolution 58/27 entitled "Right of the Palestinian people to self-determination" in April 2025.¹⁶¹ Subsequently, the General Assembly adopted resolution ES-10/23 on the "Admission of new Members to the United Nations," which strengthened Palestine's powers in the General Assembly.¹⁶²

In October 2025, a coalition of Member States negotiated a ceasefire in the Gaza Strip that would allow for greater humanitarian access in the area.¹⁶³ In its resolution 2803 (2025), the Security Council commended this step, established a Board of Peace as a transitional administration to facilitate the demilitarization and redevelopment of Gaza, and endorsed the Comprehensive Plan to End the Gaza Conflict, which involves deploying a temporary International Stabilization Force to facilitate internal security in Gaza and a gradual end to the Israeli occupation.¹⁶⁴ Since the ceasefire, UNRWA reports that Israeli forces have expanded their control to 65% of the Gaza Strip and continue to conduct airstrikes and restrict access to humanitarian aid.¹⁶⁵

Role of the International System

Multiple United Nations bodies are involved in studying, reporting on, and providing aid in the context of the Gaza conflict.¹⁶⁶ The World Health Organization provides fuel, medical supplies, and operational support, coordinating targeted health programs like their routine immunization catch-up campaign in partnership with the Vaccine Alliance.¹⁶⁷ The United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) tracks child casualties and educational losses due to the conflict and has screened approximately 317,000 children for malnutrition to date.¹⁶⁸ UNRWA is the primary provider of medical, educational, and food assistance services to Palestinian refugees, serving 5.9 million registered refugees through initiatives like its shelter repair program, which funds Palestinian efforts to reconstruct their homes.¹⁶⁹ However, there has been tension between UNRWA and Israel due to allegations of UNRWA involvement in the October 2023 Hamas attack, which prompted an internal United Nations investigation that resulted in the termination of ten UNRWA staff members.¹⁷⁰ Since then, Israel has passed numerous laws to ban UNRWA or restrict its activities, hampering the flow of humanitarian aid.¹⁷¹

Several international non-governmental organizations (NGOs), such as Amnesty International, Human Rights Watch (jointly with Oxfam), and the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies, have also reported on the situation in Palestine and facilitated the release of hostages during ceasefire negotiations.¹⁷² The content of NGO reports usually reaches the Security Council through briefings of the United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA), but the Security Council may choose to invite civil society representatives, often affiliated with an NGO or affected community, to its briefings.¹⁷³ OCHA regularly briefs the Security Council on the current humanitarian and security situation in Gaza and coordinates humanitarian action to prioritize areas of greatest need, such as those affected by famine or winter storms.¹⁷⁴ Pertinent regional bodies include the Arab League, which coordinates unified Arab positions on issues like Gaza and is a strong supporter of Palestinian statehood, UNRWA, and the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee, which brings together Arab nations, the European Union (EU), and other stakeholders to manage aid flows and reconstruction planning in Gaza.¹⁷⁵

Human Access and Aid Delivery

Many Gazans depend on humanitarian aid to access food, as the cost of a two-pound bag of flour has risen to over $100 in local markets, but delivery is challenging.¹⁷⁶ OCHA reports that most households in Gaza lack sufficient access to clean water, and 29 displacement sites have experienced communicable disease outbreaks due to a shortage of sanitation supplies.¹⁷⁷ As part of the October 2025 ceasefire deal,

Israel agreed to allow 600 trucks of aid into Gaza a day, but real figures from the Coordination of Government Activities in the Territories (COGAT), the Israeli body responsible for aid coordination, have only averaged 459 trucks a day since that time.¹⁷⁸ Roadblocks to access include the destruction of supply lines and infrastructure for supply storage, an unpredictable inspection process for trucks entering Gaza, communications blackouts, and Israeli restrictions on supplies.¹⁷⁹

The Humanitarian Country Team, which consists of the heads of United Nations entities and over 200 NGOs, warned that, even after the October 2025 ceasefire, restrictions on critical materials are one of the most acute problems in Gaza.¹⁸⁰ Materials for shelters such as sandbags and aluminum bars are considered dual-use items under current Israeli regulations, leading to delivery delays that Hamas' civil defense agency claims were the cause of 11 civilian deaths from flooding and cold exposure during Storm Byron in late 2025.¹⁸¹ Bureaucratic barriers, such as a new registration process for international NGOs that revoked the licenses of 37 humanitarian organizations, left millions of dollars worth of food, medical items, hygiene materials, and shelter assistance stuck outside Gaza and unable to reach those in need.¹⁸² Throughout the recent conflict, Israel has taken several steps to prevent essential supplies from being blocked as dual-use items, such as publishing lists of pre-approved items including medical imaging machines, oxygen generators, and wheelchairs in 2023 and 2024.¹⁸³ Yet, NGOs like Physicians for Human Rights note that none of these items were on Israel's original 2008 Defense Export Control Order list of dual-use items, highlighting the ambiguity in what could be considered a dual-use item and the resulting difficulty in coordinating aid.¹⁸⁴

Currently, through the UN2720 Mechanism, cargo is submitted for approval by Israeli authorities via a digital platform and assigned a unique code for tracking.¹⁸⁵ UN2720 monitors from the United Nations Office for Project Services are placed at border crossings and inspection points along aid corridors, where they validate the codes to ensure only approved humanitarian cargo enters.¹⁸⁶ Once inside Gaza, UN2720 monitors track trucks to their destination via GPS to identify the sale or theft of humanitarian goods, and any entities found to be in breach of principled humanitarian action are suspended.¹⁸⁷ OCHA

notes that the UN2720 Mechanism does not address the issue of a physical bottleneck at Kerem Shalom and thus calls for the opening of additional entry sites to increase the rate of aid delivery.¹⁸⁸

Israel has been cooperating with the UN2720 Mechanism, but maintains that enhanced United Nations monitoring cannot come at the expense of its own security inspections.¹⁸⁹ While COGAT has worked with the database and clearance process of the Mechanism, the Israeli-affiliated Institute for National Security Studies argues that the severe tone of recent United Nations alerts on the subject may be aimed at exerting international pressure on Israel rather than providing a data-driven assessment of the humanitarian situation.¹⁹⁰ The Permanent Observer of the State of Palestine to the United Nations called UN2720 a “step in the right direction,” but pointed out that a cessation of hostilities is essential to its full implementation.¹⁹¹

OCHA notes that maintaining the safety of aid workers is a critical challenge in Gaza.¹⁹² Multiple Hamas attacks on border crossings, such as the bombing of Kerem Shalom in May 2024 and shooting at the King Hussein crossing in September 2024, have disrupted the flow of humanitarian aid.¹⁹³ In July 2025, civilians approaching a World Food Programme convoy carrying food assistance into Gaza came under fire from Israeli tanks and snipers, endangering those providing and attempting to access aid.¹⁹⁴ According to an OCHA report, the lack of reliable communication near border crossings due to inconsistent cellular network coverage, jammed satellite phones, and outdated radio equipment creates security risks and prevents efficient aid coordination.¹⁹⁵ To mitigate these issues and increase the capacity for aid delivery, OCHA calls for civilian police protection of humanitarian transports, the opening of more border crossings and internal routes for humanitarian access, as well as the lifting of bans on key safety and logistical equipment.¹⁹⁶

OCHA's Humanitarian Assistance Plan for Gaza states that humanitarian aid alone cannot support Gaza's population of over two million, necessitating the return of private sector goods to Gaza's marketplaces.¹⁹⁷ This is supported by the 2026 United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) report The cumulative economic cost of occupation for the Palestinian people (2000-2024) and the long road to recovery, which highlights the unsustainable Palestinian dependence on foreign aid.¹⁹⁸ Olga Cherevko, OCHA spokesperson, has warned that additional checks for commercial goods entering Gaza may delay the processing of humanitarian aid when it is needed the most.¹⁹⁹ An OCHA proposal to mitigate this concern while maintaining a flow of commercial goods into Gaza is to keep humanitarian aid and private sector access physically separate, with dedicated border crossings for each.²⁰⁰

Settlements and Territorial Control

Israeli settlements are civilian communities established in territories acquired by Israel in the 1967 Six-Day War that are not under Israeli sovereignty, and are rapidly expanding.²⁰¹ According to a report from the EU representative to UNRWA, Israeli settlement plans in the West Bank have increased by 250% since 2018, recently expanding into areas under Palestinian jurisdiction per the Oslo II Agreement.²⁰² This expansion has been accompanied by an increase in settler violence against Palestinians, with OCHA reporting a record 1,680 incidents of such violence in 2025.²⁰³ The past year has seen a blurring of the lines between settler and state violence; according to a February 2026 report of OHCHR, Israel has provided vehicles and weapons to so-called “settlement defense squads,” which attack Palestinians, destroy their supplies, and threaten them with further violence if they do not leave the area.²⁰⁴ In its resolution 2334 (2016) on “The situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question,” the Security Council affirmed that Israeli settlements in the OPT have “no legal validity” and demanded that Israel cease all settlement activity.²⁰⁵ The Secretary-General provides regular reports on the implementation of this resolution to the Security Council, noting that, as of December 2025, Israel has taken no steps to comply with resolution 2334 (2016).²⁰⁶

Israel argues that Article 49 of the Fourth Geneva Convention does not apply to its activities in the West Bank as the settlement is voluntary and the West Bank territory is technically considered “disputed,” not “occupied.”²⁰⁷ A 2024 Advisory Opinion of the ICJ addressed this argument by reiterating that Article 49 prohibits any civilian transfer, forcible or otherwise, that is facilitated by the occupying power.²⁰⁸ It additionally noted that the situation in the West Bank and Gaza meets the international legal definition of occupation established in Article 42 of the Regulations concerning the Laws and Customs of War on Land that are annexed to the 1907 Convention (IV) respecting the Laws and Customs of War on Land: being under the effective control of a foreign military power.²⁰⁹

According to a UNCTAD report to the General Assembly, movement restrictions on Palestinians have significant economic ramifications, with an estimated cumulative loss of $50 billion to the West Bank's GDP from 2000 to 2020.²¹⁰ In February 2025, there were 247 checkpoints and 205 road gates obstructing the movement of Palestinians in the West Bank, many of which were initially established by settlers.²¹¹ Meanwhile, the annual contribution of settlements to Israel's economy is estimated at $41 billion.²¹² The 2024 ICJ Advisory Opinion established that Member States have a legal obligation to avoid trade relations that support Israel's illegal settlements.²¹³ During its tenth emergency special session on "Illegal Israeli actions in occupied East Jerusalem and the rest of the Occupied Palestinian Territory" in 2024, the General Assembly called upon Member States to cease importing products originating in Israeli settlements and to avoid arms trade with Israel when there is reasonable suspicion that the weapons would be used in the OPT.²¹⁴

There have been several multilateral efforts to implement the General Assembly's directive against supporting Israeli settlements.²¹⁵ These include an EU requirement to label products imported from Israeli settlements with their actual origin rather than as "made in Israel."²¹⁶ The EU has an arrangement with Israeli customs authorities that prevents settlement-made goods from receiving preferential tariff rates.²¹⁷ In 2024, it enacted targeted sanctions against pro-settlement Israeli ministers, violent settlers, and settler-affiliated entities.²¹⁸ Some Member States have drafted legislation to ban imports from Israeli settlements altogether.²¹⁹ At the 2025 Emergency Conference of the Hague Group, an international coalition established to hold Israel accountable for alleged violations of international law in Palestine, 30 Member States from around the world made a joint commitment to cease all arms trade with Israel and to refrain from business interests that could financially support Israeli settlements.²²⁰ However, according to a progress report from the International Humanitarian Law Centre, full compliance with the ICJ decision is still far from being a reality as many states continue with business as usual.²²¹

Conclusion

Gaza continues to depend on humanitarian aid for survival, but its delivery faces many logistical and political challenges.²²² Additionally, the expansion of Israel's settlement presence in the West Bank, with associated settler violence, has displaced entire communities in the Jordan Valley.²²³ The international community has attempted to address these issues with the UN2720 Mechanism for effective aid delivery and the 2024 General Assembly call to end economic cooperation with settlements, but the volume of aid entering Gaza remains restricted and settler violence continues at record levels.²²⁴ The October 2025 ceasefire deal saw the establishment of the Board of Peace as a transitional administration and the release of all remaining Israeli hostages, but hundreds of Palestinians have been killed since its implementation, highlighting a need for further diplomatic action to achieve true peace on the ground.²²⁵

Further Research

As delegates conduct further research and consider how to address this topic, they should consider: What is the role of the private sector in getting goods into Gaza and how can it complement humanitarian aid? How can the Security Council increase the safety and efficiency of aid delivery while addressing Israeli security concerns? What mechanisms can be put in place to enforce the ICJ's call for Member States to cease economic cooperation with illegal Israeli settlements? What policies can individual Member States enact to avoid supporting settlement activity?
